IN THE DESIGN and installation of new instruments and in the rebuilding, restoration or simply the cleaning of old organs, and their maintenance, we uphold the highest standards in traditional craftsmanship and technical expertise. Whatever your requirements we offer expert advice and help.

The answer to your problem could be the Walker Positif. Available in several models, this versatile pipe organ has been specially developed for the smaller church — modest in price and dimensions, but so planned as to achieve maximum fullness and clarity, with remarkable variety and blend. It is delighting clergy and church musicians alike with its success in accompaniment, in leading the congregation and in solo performance. Illustrated booklet on request; demonstrations in all parts of the country, by arrangement.

"GOING, THEREFORE, TEACH ALL NATIONS"
 We cannot all leave home to become Missionaries in the field but we are all asked to help—by our prayers and contributions —in the rewarding work of evangelising all nations.

JOIN

The Society for the Propagation of the Faith

(SCOTTISH BRANCH)

(It's one of the Holy Father's special societies for "STAY-AT-HOME-MISSIONARIES")

TO BE A MEMBER . . .

1. ENROL IN YOUR PARISH GROUP. Give in your name to your Parish Priest or Curate—or send it to one of the officials listed below.
2. PRAY DAILY FOR THE CHURCH'S MISSION WORK. Recite daily one Our Father, one Hail Mary and add the invocations: "St. Francis Xavier, pray for us. St. Theresa, pray for us."
3. HELP THE MISSIONS FINANCIALLY
 "Ordinary Members" contribute 25p a year.
 "Special Members" contribute £1 (100 p) a year.
 "Life Members" make one contribution of £10.
 (*Parish Priests usually arrange for the collection of subscriptions by appointing "Promoters of the Society" in each parish.)
 You can make your contribution of £1 either in full, or in 10 monthly instalments of 10p.
 In some parishes the contributions are taken up by a weekly envelope marked "2p for the Missions."

PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERSHIP

- Apart from the satisfaction you will have of "doing your bit for the Missions"—
- 1) you will share in 40,000 Masses specially offered by the missionaries supported by the Society.
 - 2) Holy Mass is said every day in the crypt of St. Peter's, Rome, for all deceased Life and Special Members.
"How sweet to die knowing that in life we have faithfully worked for and helped the Missions."—POPE JOHN XXIII.

President:

 Bishop of Argyll and the Isles.

National Secretary:

THE CHURCH IN SCOTLAND

THE HIERARCHY OF SCOTLAND

I

FROM THE EXTINCTION OF THE HIERARCHY IN 1603 TILL ITS RESTORATION IN 1878

The ancient hierarchy ended with James Betoun, archbishop of Glasgow, who died at Paris on the 25th April, 1603, aged 79. After being subjected to the jurisdiction of the archpriests and first vicar apostolic of England till 1623, and afterwards to local prefects of the mission, the clergy were incorporated into a missionary body by decree of Propaganda, 1653.

PREFECTS APOSTOLIC

1. William Ballantine: born at North Berwick, 1618; educated University of Edinburgh (did not graduate), Scots College, Rome; ordained at Rome, 1646; appointed prefect, 13th October 1653; died at Elgin, 2nd September 1661.
2. Alexander Winster: born "in the diocese of Moray," c. 1625; educated Scots College, Rome; ordained at Rome, 1657; appointed prefect, 12th June 1662; resigned July 1697; died at Banff, 14th January 1708. THE VICARS APOSTOLIC OF SCOTLAND

1: 1694-1727

In May 1694 a vicariate apostolic of Scotland was founded and the first vicar apostolic nominated on 24th August 1694.

1. Thomas Nicolson: born at Birkenbog, Banffshire, c. 1642; probably brought up as an Episcopalian; educated University of Aberdeen (matriculated 1660); regent (i.e. professor), University of Glasgow, 1666-1682; received into Catholic Church, 1682; studied for priesthood at Padua, Italy; ordained at Padua, 1685; returned to Scotland as missionary, December 1687; imprisoned at Edinburgh, November 1688; escaped, subsequently re-arrested and imprisoned at Stirling; exiled to France on bond of his brother, Lord Kemnay; chaplain to English Benedictine nuns, Dunkirk, 1689-1694; consecrated titular bishop of Peristachium and first vicar apostolic of Scotland by Jules de Mascaron, Cong. Orat., bishop of Agen, France, in secret* at Paris, 27th February 1695; arrived in England, November 1696, arrested, and released, May 1697; arrived Edinburgh, July 1697; divided Scotland into fixed districts to which missionaries were attached and prepared rules for their direction, April 1700; took up residence at Preshome, Banffshire, which thus became administrative centre of Catholicism in Scotland; imprisoned at Fochabers after failure of 1715 rising; died at Preshome, 23rd October 1718.
2. James Gordon: born at Enzie, Banffshire, 31st January 1665; educated Scots College, Paris; ordained at Paris, 1792; missionary at Enzie, 1692-1702; assistant to Scottish agent at Rome, 1702-1706; English agent at Rome, 1703-1706; consecrated titular bishop of Nicopolis and coadjutor vicar apostolic of Scotland by Marc Antonio Barbarigo, cardinal bishop of Montefiascone and Corneta, in secret at Montefiascone, 11th April 1706; arrived in Scotland, July 1706; made heroic visitations of Highlands and Lowlands; founded with seven boys [Hugh Macdonald (see (10) below) being one of them] seminary at Loch Morar, Invernesshire, 1714; in hiding with rest of clergy during persecutions after failure of 1715 rising; re-opened Loch Morar seminary and transferred it to Scalan, Banffshire, 1716; succeeded as vicar apostolic, 23rd October 1718; translated on division of vicariate to Lowland District, 23rd July 1727, but translation not effective until 18th October 1731; died at Thornhill, Perthshire, 1st March 1746.

*All consecrations of Scottish bishops for the next century were in private; but for some consecrations extraordinary measures were taken to conceal both the event and the news that it had taken place and these are indicated in the entries by the phrase "in secret." The first public consecration of a Scottish vicar apostolic abroad was that of John Geddes in Madrid in 1780 and, at home, Alexander Paterson in Paisley in 1816.

3. John Wallace: born at Arbroath, c. 1658; brought up as an Episcopalian and may have been ordained in Episcopalian ministry; received into Catholic Church, c. 1686; in exile after Revolution with Jacobite court at Ste Germain-en-Laye; retired to live at Scots College, Paris; was persuaded by Bishop James Gordon to return with him to Scotland, July 1706; ordained at Preshome, 14th April 1708; missionary at Arbroath; summoned to judiciary court at Perth, 1709, for apostasy but did not appear and was outlawed; consecrated titular bishop of Cyrrha and coadjutor vicar apostolic of Scotland by James Gordon, titular bishop of Nicopolis and vicar apostolic of Scotland, in secret at Edinburgh, 2nd October 1720; arrested Edinburgh, 1722, and again outlawed; died at Edinburgh, 11th July 1733.

II: 1727-1827

On 23rd July 1727, Scotland was divided into two vicariates, the Lowland and Highland Districts. Alexander John Grant [born at Enzie, Banffshire, c. 1693, elder brother of James Grant (see (5) below); educated Scots College, Rome; ordained at Rome, 23rd December 1719; superior at Scalau, 1720-1726] was nominated titular bishop of Sura and vicar apostolic, Highland District, 6th August 1727. He went to Rome for consecration but, for a number of reasons, this was delayed; returning from Italy to Scotland, he was last heard from at Genoa, ill and in great poverty. No further trace of him has been discovered. His death was reported to Rome but not, apparently, to Propaganda. A successor was not appointed until 20th January 1731 when Hugh Macdonald was nominated to the Highland District.

II

FROM THE RESTORATION OF THE HIERARCHY IN 1878
TO THE PRESENT DAY

The Apostolic Letter "Ex Supremo Apostolatus Apice" of Leo XIII, 4th March, 1878, divided Scotland into the Province of St. Andrews and Edinburgh (with four Suffragan Sees) and the Archdiocese of Glasgow, which was directly subject to the Holy See. By the Apostolic Constitution "Maxime Interest" of Pius XII, 25th May, 1947, and the Apostolic Constitution "Dominici Gregis" of the same date, the Archdiocese of Glasgow was erected into a Province and divided into the Metropolitan See of Glasgow with the Suffragan Sees of Motherwell and Paisley.

THE PROVINCE OF
ST. ANDREWS AND EDINBURGH

The Province of St. Andrews and Edinburgh consists of the Archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh and the four Suffragan Sees of Aberdeen, Argyll and the Isles, Dunkeld, and Galloway.

ARCHDIOCESE OF ST. ANDREWS AND EDINBURGH

ORDINATIONS — 1973

ARCHDIOCESE OF ST. ANDREWS AND EDINBURGH

Rev. Patrick Aidan Cannon was born at Duns, Berwickshire, on the 11th October, 1945. He studied for the priesthood at Campion House, Osterley, and at St. Andrew's College, Drygrange. He was ordained priest for the Archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh at the Church of St. Mary and St. David, Hawick, on 31st March, 1973, by the Right Reverend James Monaghan, Bishop of Cell Ausaille and vicar-general of the Archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh. After a temporary curacy at Currie, Father Cannon is now appointed curate at St. Agatha's, Methil, Fife.

Rev. Anthony Leonard Duffy, born at Edinburgh on 27th May, 1947, was educated at Holy Cross Academy, Edinburgh, and St. Andrew's College, Drygrange. He was ordained priest for the Archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, on 17th March, 1973, at the Sacred Heart Church, Edinburgh, by His Eminence Cardinal Gordon Gray, Archbishop of St. Andrews and Edinburgh. Father Duffy is now a curate at St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh.

Rev. Gerard Robert Hand, who was born at Edinburgh on the 12th January, 1949, received his education at Holy Cross Academy, Edinburgh, and St. Andrew's College, Drygrange. He was ordained for the Archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh on the 25th March, 1973, at St. Patrick's Church, Edinburgh, by His Lordship Bishop James Monaghan, vicar-general of the Archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh. Father Hand has been appointed curate at St. Andrew's Church, Livingston.

ARCHDIOCESE OF GLASGOW

Rev. Patrick Gerard Currie was born at Dumbarton on 2nd March, 1949, and was educated at St. Patrick's High School, Dumbarton and St. Peter's College, Cardross. He was ordained to the priesthood for the Archdiocese of Glasgow at St. Peter's College, Cardross, on the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul, 1973, by the Most Reverend James Donald Scanlan, Archbishop of Glasgow, and he is now a curate at St. Mary Immaculate, Pollokshaws.

Rev. Anthony Gallagher, born at Glasgow on 5th August, 1949, received his ecclesiastical education at St. Vincent's College, Langbank, St. Mary's College, Blairs, and St. Peter's College, Cardross. He was ordained for the Archdiocese of Glasgow, at St. Stephen's Church, Dalmuir, on 30th June, 1973, by the Right Reverend Thomas Winning, Bishop of Louth and Auxiliary to the Archbishop of Glasgow. Father Gallagher has been appointed curate at St. Mary's Church, Abercromby Street, Glasgow.

Rev. Edward Brian McNaught, S.T.B., was born at Glasgow on 25th April, 1949, and was educated at St. Vincent's College, Langbank, St. Mary's College, Blairs, and the Royal Scots College, Valladolid. On 6th July, 1973, he was ordained priest for the Archdiocese of Glasgow, at St. Gabriel's Church, Merrylee, by His Grace the Archbishop of Glasgow. After a temporary appointment at St. Paul's, Whiteinch, Father McNaught is now a curate at St. Teresa's, Possilpark.

Rev. Anthony Coyle, S.T.B., was born at Coatbridge on 26th November, 1948, and was educated at St. Patrick's High School, Coatbridge, and the Royal Scots College, Valladolid. Father Coyle has been appointed curate at St. Columbkille's, Rutherglen.

Rev. James Shiels was born on 3rd March, 1949, at Derry. He was educated at St. Columba's College, Derry, and at St. Patrick's College, Carlow. He was ordained to the priesthood for the Diocese of Motherwell at St. Columba's Church, Long Tower, Derry, on the Feast of St. Columba, 1973, by the Right Reverend Neil Farren, Apostolic Administrator of Derry. Father Shiels has been appointed curate at St. Columba's, Viewpark, Uddingston.

DIOCESE OF PAISLEY

Rev. Joseph John Dow was born at Greenock on 21st November, 1945. He was educated at Osterley and St. Peter's College, Cardross, and was ordained for the Diocese of Paisley, on the Feast of SS. Peter and Paul, 1973, at St. Mungo's Church, Greenock, by the Right Reverend Stephen McGill, Bishop of Paisley. Father Dow has been appointed curate at St. Mirin's Cathedral, Paisley.

OBITUARIES — 1973

Very Reverend William Canon Mallon, D.D. — 2nd January, 1973

William Malloy Mallon was born in the Lanarkshire village of Glenboig on 23rd May, 1904—the son of a railway signalman, the grandson of a fireclay miner.

He attended the local Catholic school before going to Our Lady's High School, Motherwell, for two years. In 1917 he entered Blairs College and, on completing his secondary education, he was sent to the Royal Scots College in Valladolid. The next seven years he spent in Valladolid studying philosophy and theology, passing summer vacations at his beloved Boecillo. He was ordained priest on 25th May, 1929, together with Bishop McGee and Bishop Hart. He came back to Scotland, spending a few months in Greenock.

Being a man of great intellect and industry, he was then sent back to Spain to complete his studies for a doctorate in Sacred Theology, which Valladolid University awarded him on 12th June, 1930—a unique distinction at that time.

The prospect of an academic life in the seminary appealed to him at the time, and continued to attract him for long afterwards. But his destiny as a priest did not lie there, and he was appointed in 1930 to a curacy in St. Mary's, Greenock.

He retained throughout his life a deep love of the life, literature and theology of the Church in Spain, indeed an admiration for all things Spanish. It is through such priests as Dr. Mallon that the tradition of our foreign colleges continues to enrich and diversify our native Scottish traditions.

A few years later, he was transferred to St. Alphonsus', Glasgow, where he was to spend almost twenty years among his beloved Calton folk. Dr. Mallon was a shy man, often a worried man. He found security at St. Alphonsus' in the person of the parish priest, Fr. Hourigan. Many a curate ate his dinner in the spiritual presence of Fr. Hourigan. "Fr. Hourigan said" was the compulsory preface to many of Canon Mallon's dicta about priestly piety and work. The young Fr. Mallon was an accomplished violinist and he formed an orchestra while in St. Alphonsus'—indeed, to the parishioners he became known affectionately as the "Henry Hall of the Calton."

He was also a keen fisherman and he would boast occasionally of his skill in shooting.

In May 1950, he was appointed the first parish priest of St. Bernadette's, Glasgow, where he built the presbytery with voluntary parish labour. He was much interested in the Scout movement and led their pilgrimage in 1954 to Lourdes. Also in 1954, he celebrated the Silver Jubilee of his Ordination.

The following summer found him on holiday in the Highlands with a priest friend. By chance Archbishop Campbell met him and forthwith offered him the choice of three parishes. Canon Mallon demurred. It was only at the insistence of his friend that he wrote the archbishop a letter, accepting any parish—expressing his loyalty and obedience. And thus he was appointed to St. Stephen's, Dalmuir, on 23rd September, 1955. He incorporated a new tower and the Lourdes Carillon into the church then being built and supervised its completion and solemn opening.

Firmly and trenchantly he preached the old faith. Mixed marriages were not encouraged. "Trust in Our Lady and she will get you a good Catholic husband"—this was the advice he gave many a girl who was considering a mixed marriage, and he was often proved right. He was at this time well known throughout the archdiocese, being a Religious Inspector of Schools. During Lent 1972, he was appointed a canon of the Metropolitan Chapter, a distinction which Dalmuir fittingly celebrated in due course.

In his later years Canon Mallon was a prey to anxiety on many counts. The Church and the world were moving too quickly for him. His motto might have been—Vetera sint omnia. But although he found it hard to adapt, he accepted liturgical innovations such as Mass facing the people and lay readers with good grace. Furthermore, his health became so uncertain that he was afraid to venture out of doors, convinced as he was that he might collapse at any time. On New Year's Day, 1973, at great personal effort, he offered Mass, secretly convinced that this—his first parish Mass for some time—would be the last time he would pray with his people. Early next evening he died. As he had anticipated, his heart gave out very suddenly.

In some ways, with his worries, a kind of rigidity and a life-long shyness, he was at times thought to be a difficult man. And yet he had a deep faith, with a particular belief in the authority and majesty of God. In his passing, he is genuinely missed for the many acts of kindness and courtesy which passed unknown to the brethren at large. It was said of him that he would never truly be happy in this life. Surely now he enjoys a place of refreshment, light and peace. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Joseph Francis MacArdle — 10th February, 1973

The Rev. Joseph Francis MacArdle was born at Drumconrath, Co. Meath, on the 25th March, 1899. He studied at St. Kieran's College, Kilkenny, and on the 11th June, 1928, he was ordained to the priesthood at Kilkenny Cathedral by the Right Rev. James Roche, bishop of Ross.

Father MacArdle came to Scotland in 1928 to take up pastoral work in the Archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh. Two years spent as a curate at St. Mary's Cathedral, Edinburgh, were followed by a short curacy at Musselburgh and, in 1933, he was given charge of St. Mary's, Dunbar, and later, of St. Joseph's, Kelty. His health was unstable and he had on occasion to seek leave of absence from pastoral duties. In the 1940s and 1950s, he served in several parishes of the archdiocese, at Broxburn, Denny, Bonnybridge and St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh. In 1952, he was asked to undertake the important task of opening a new parish to serve the needs of the expanding Catholic community at Bonnyrigg in Midlothian. Securing a house where he could live among his prospective parishioners and a suitable site for a new church, he set to work with a will to organise the Catholics of the neighbourhood into a united, loyal and purposeful community. To such effect did he labour that on the 23rd December, 1956, the foundation stone of the new church was solemnly laid and, in the following year, the need for saying Mass in the local cinema was over and the parishioners were able to gather for God's worship in the fine new church of Our Lady of Consolation. It was no easy task for a man of indifferent health, already crippled by several attacks of thrombosis, but as he had done in the parishes where he had served in earlier years, he was unremitting in the house to house visitation of his people and in his care for the sick. The good people of Bonnyrigg responded generously and a tradition of loyal co-operation between priest and people has been a mark of Bonnyrigg parish ever since.

In 1960, Father MacArdle had finally to retire from active pastoral work. For some years he remained under the care of the Sisters at St. Anne's, Musselburgh and, in 1967, he went to live at Bettystown, Co. Meath. He died at Drogheda on Saturday, 10th February, 1973. Bishop James Monaghan, auxiliary bishop and vicar-general, Canon James Harold and other priests of the archdiocese attended the Requiem Mass and funeral on Monday, 12th February, 1973. Father MacArdle was buried in his native land. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Richard Lillis—12th February, 1973

Fr. Richard Lillis died on Monday, 12th February, 1973. He was 51.

He was born at Querrin, Co. Clare, on 20th April, 1922, the son of Daniel Lillis, a local schoolteacher, and Catherine Lillis. The sound, religious atmosphere of his home is reflected in his own life and in the lives of three other members of the family: Fr. James Lillis, a Columban Father; Sister Camillus and Sister Catherine, Columban Sisters, all missionaries who have worked in the Philippines, in Korea and in South America. Fr. Richard Lillis, too, had a full share of the missionary spirit.

After attending Querrin National School he received his secondary education at Roscrea and did philosophy at Mungret College, Limerick. He studied theology at St. Kieran's College, Kilkenny, and was ordained on 9th June, 1946, by the Right Rev. Dr. Collier, Bishop of Ossory. In the autumn he came to the Archdiocese of Glasgow and was appointed curate at Viewpark. Two years later, with the division of the archdiocese, he became a member of the Diocese of Motherwell. By a happy accident, even before the division, his work was in the County of Lanark. He was to give himself to the Catholics of Lanarkshire, of whatever region or loyalty, and identify himself with their welfare and with their interests. He had to adapt himself to a country which seemed like his own, yet was subtly different. In this process the missionary impulse of the family was dominant. He took on the outlook of the West of Scotland, and without pretending or sacrificing conviction, never considered Scotland on any terms but its own. His degree of adaptation was so complete as to conceal the effort it must have cost. Some attributed his achievement to his remarkable memory for people and to his quick sympathy. These qualities were influential, but the source of his assimilation was much deeper; it was spiritual and apostolic.

From 1948 to 1961 he was curate at Uddingston, Cambuslang, Bargeddie, and St. Patrick's, Coatbridge. For a short time he served as chaplain at Carstairs. He recalled his pleasant stay there with affection and often went back to visit the community. In 1961 he was asked to take charge of the new parish of St. Serf, Airdrie.

He could not know that his last, and his most fruitful years had begun.

As soon as he obtained a suitable house with facilities for daily Mass and the offices for a parish, he faced the first duty—the building of the spiritual edifice. The material building, though he took an interest in every nail, was the concern of others. He found much to do. He had ample opportunity to perform all the duties and to practise all the virtues of the Good Shepherd. The spiritual foundation duly laid, he devoted his powers of persuasion and exhortation to the completion of the building. When Bishop Thomson opened the new church on Sunday, 17th December, 1967, the parish of St. Serf was securely established.

In addition to the usual commitments of a parish priest—membership of the District Education Sub-Committee, for example—Fr. Lillis had interests in other bodies. He was a keen member of the Airdrie and Coatbridge branch of the National Savings Committee for Scotland, and he presented a cup to be awarded locally. He was a member of the Airdrie and District Committee for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Chaplain and Vice-President of the Y.M.C.A., and a member of the Old People's Welfare Committee. He was known for his civic conscience and for his zeal for promoting good relations in the community.

He was proud to be a citizen of Airdrie, followed its affairs keenly, and loved to hear of its history. When Airdrie Burgh celebrated the 150th anniversary of its foundation, Fr. Lillis displayed great enthusiasm. On his initiative, a scene illustrating the work of the Cistercians in the Monklands, was added to the pageant. In the same spirit of friendliness to his fellow-townsmen, he made contact with the minister and congregation of the new Church of Scotland church of St. Columba and laid the foundations of a genuine ecumenical relationship.

In 1972 he was appointed parish priest of St. Patrick's, Shieldmuir, a slightly larger, longer-established parish. He faced problems rather different from building from scratch. To deepen the spiritual life of the parish he arranged a mission by the Redemptorist Fathers. As in Airdrie, he was particularly keen on promoting devotion to Our Lady and on encouraging and sharing in pilgrimages to Lourdes. Having put first things first, he turned to the task of renovating, almost rebuilding, the presbytery. He had the satisfaction of seeing that job all but completed before his death.

Any assessment of the character and achievement of a man is made easier when we can discern a clear guiding principle in his life. The force that commanded all the activities and supplied all the energies of Fr. Lillis was his consciousness of his priesthood and his reverence for that mystery. He was a pastor of souls to the very marrow and, as a pastor, he was never idle. For his work as a priest he had some excellent endowments, inherited and acquired. He had an affectionate, ardent temperament which made him quick to respond to need. He had an astonishing capacity for work which would lead him to deny himself sleep—and, it was sometimes wryly said, deny others sleep. He not only faced a problem; he welcomed it. His dashing manner concealed remarkable stamina and perseverance.

There were counterparts to his good qualities. His ardent ways sometimes became impetuous and, occasionally, led to opposition and hostility. No one was more dismayed than he, or more penitent, when he discovered that he had unwittingly given offence. He went the length of self-abasement to regain a friendship or remove a misunderstanding. Once he was saddened when, after many attempts to offer an apology, his efforts were received with coldness and disdain.

He was diligent in visiting old and sick people, including some members of the Church of Scotland parish who had a special claim to his ministrations. He was generous to those who made calls on him for financial help, even to the point of self-impoverishment. He never asked questions; he gave.

People had the impression that he settled everything in a series of snap judgements, and that he spent his time rushing from one thing to another. The truth is that he would sit far into the night trying to find the solution to a problem. It says much for his exalted notion of his office that, no matter how great the fatigue, he always devoted time to serious prayer.

Obedience to authority was as natural to him as the air he breathed. He had the good fortune to belong to a generation which regarded obedience as prompt and unquestioning. But his obedience was not unreasoning. If he found fault with a policy, he spoke his mind; but, when the bishop made a request, he acceded at once.

He considered that loyalty, whether to the Holy See or to parents, has become a neglected virtue and he deplored, above all, the extravagances which some claim to find in the decrees of Vatican II.

When one came to understand the man, one recognised that he was "a holy and humble man of heart." Like all men, he had his faults and contradictions. There were agreeable contrasts in him as when, by his sheer goodness, he became persona grata to the congregation of St. Columba's Church of Scotland church and thereby broke the barriers of nationality, sectarianism and convention. All his own training had been thoroughly conventional, yet he could transcend it if the need of a parishioner, or if any human being, called for his help. He could be called conventional in his devotion and, to some extent, in his preaching and teaching; but the devotion was genuine and the teaching mature.

He was anything but conventional in his response to others. The lives of the saints supply many instances where they became positively eccentric under the impulses of divine charity. "Charity seeketh not her own" but spends till there is nothing left to spend. This was true of Fr. Lillis and his charity had its source in an ideal which has its finest expression in the words of St. Paul: "I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, and a teacher." The motivating force of all of Fr. Lillis' activity was apostolic. May he rest in peace.

Rev. James Kennedy Robertson, M.A. — 22nd February, 1973

It is difficult for a Catholic in present-day Britain to recapture the mood of exhilaration which permeated the Church throughout the United Kingdom in the years between the two great wars. Catholic life was expanding in all directions. Each year saw steady numerical increase in born Catholics and in converts to the Church. New parochial churches and institutions were being provided; the ranks of diocesan clergy, of religious orders and of missionaries to the heathen were amply supplied by a steady stream of excellent and eager recruits. The life of the Church was invigorated by a splendid revival of the Latin liturgy accompanied by a renewal of interest in Gregorian music and a rededication of the visual arts to the service of religion. Bound together by strong ties of loyalty, the whole Catholic community, laity and clergy alike, seemed devoted in their efforts to promote the welfare of the Church. A galaxy of writers who sustained the intellectual life of British Catholicism, during that period, was led by the forceful dogmatism of Hilaire Belloc and the more alluring gaiety of G. K. Chesterton. It was a buoyant time and it lasted on until a Belgian prelate at the Second Vatican Council described the mood as "triumphalism" and inclined to the view that it was a sin. The mood has vanished and has now given place to the prevailing winter of our discontent.

Father James Kennedy Robertson was a convert to the Church during those expansive years. He was born at Insch in Aberdeenshire on the 7th of November, 1899. Following in the footsteps of an elder brother, who became a well-known minister in the Church of Scotland, he studied at Aberdeen University from 1918 until 1923, when he took his M.A. degree. At King's College, his love of English literature deepened and he developed a sensitive appreciation of prose and verse which remained with him all his days.

From 1923 until 1930, he taught in various schools in the north-east, at Alford, at Fraserburgh and at Grantown-on-Spey. Under the pseudonym, Robert Kennedy, he contributed articles and poems to newspapers and journals. He was deeply interested in drama and was a popular and successful producer of amateur theatricals, especially at Grantown-on-Spey. His interest in current literature introduced him inevitably to the writings of G. K. Chesterton. Chesterton's literary style and his philosophy harmonised with much in James Robertson's own nature and he was captivated but, up to the time he taught at Grantown-on-Spey, he had never had any direct contact with the Catholic Church. In his walks through Speyside he became friendly with an Irish tramp who, as often as not, had been drinking too much and needed a guiding hand home. The tramp's alcoholism inevitably brought him to the local hospital: there James Robertson used to visit him and was mightily perplexed by the old man's resolute insistence on receiving the ministrations of a Catholic priest before he died. All of James Robertson's inbred religious complacencies and assumptions were shaken and, after much thought, he decided that he would have to become a priest and a Catholic, more or less in that order. Making enquiries, he was informed, wrongly, that the nearest Catholic church was at Aberlour and, one Saturday, he set out to walk the twenty-four miles to Aberlour to consult the priest. The priest at Aberlour, Father John McBain, asked his young visitor when he had made up his mind to become a Catholic and, on being told that the final decision had been made on the previous Sunday, he murmured: "Oh aye! Pentecost!", a phrase which puzzled James Robertson for many a day. He received instruction from Father McBain and on the 10th of January, 1931, he was received into the Church at Fort Augustus Abbey. He lost no time in asking Bishop George Bennett of Aberdeen to accept him as a candidate for the diocesan priesthood and, having been accepted, he began, in October 1931, his studies for the priesthood at the Scots College and Gregorian University in Rome.

Though somewhat older than the average aspirant to the priesthood, James Robertson joined fully in the life of his fellow-students, his attractive personality with its strong sense of kindly humour and his enthusiasm for all college activities made him immensely popular with his contemporaries. Towards the end of his seven years of study he was ordained to the priesthood on the 11th of July, 1937. The priesthood filled him with happiness and contentment and to him it was a special augury of blessing that, by mere chance, the date of his ordination was the feast day of St. Drostan of Deer, one of the great saints of the north-east of Scotland.

He came home in the summer of 1938 and, on his way visited Beaconsfield to pray at the grave of G. K. Chesterton whose writings had turned his mind towards the Catholic Church. Bishop Bennett appointed him curate to Father Val Mackenzie at St. Mary's, Inverness. It was a happy parish; there was mutual esteem between the parish priest and his curate and the older parishioners still look back with appreciation to the animated parochial life of those days. Father Robertson spent seven happy years at Inverness until 1946 when Bishop Bennett appointed him to the charge of St. Gregory's, at Preshome in the Enzie of Banffshire.

Father Robertson was sorry to leave Inverness but was overjoyed at the parish which had been entrusted to his care. Preshome was, without exception, the most historic Catholic parish in the whole of Scotland. From the seventeenth century the farmhouse at Preshome in the Enzie had been the headquarters of the Counter-Reformation in Scotland. Bishop Thomas Nicholson resided here, as did the great Bishop James Gordon and, for a time, Bishop George Hay. The handsome church of St. Gregory, successor of a series of churches destroyed by anti-Catholic and anti-Jacobite attacks during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, was built in 1788. In the early nineteenth century, the farmhouse had been replaced by a large house, designed by Bishop James Kyle. From this centre Bishop Kyle and his assistants served all the churches of the Enzie. Here the treasures of the Scottish Church were preserved. The chalices and altar vessels, rescued from the Chapel Royal of Holyroodhouse in 1689, were brought here for safety. Here Bishop Kyle gathered together all the manuscripts and documents that had been salvaged from the Scots colleges and abbeys on the Continent, wrecked by the French Revolutionary armies. Most of Preshome's glory had passed by the year 1946, but much still remained. At Mass were used chalices that had served missionary priests of the seventeenth century. The Blessed Sacrament was normally reserved in a superb silver ciborium made for Holyrood Abbey Church in 1587. Vestments made from elaborate early nineteenth-century wedding dresses were a reminder of the piety of bygone days. The small library contained many early books that had nourished the devotional life of seventeenth and eighteenth-century Catholics in the north-east. There were documents evocative of the heroic past such as the volume of "Iuramenta Alumnorum," a manuscript containing the Mission Oath written out fully in his own hand by every student of the Scots College, Rome, between the years 1616 and 1789. And there were many thousands of eighteenth and nineteenth-century letters dealing with the affairs of the Scottish Mission and of the Family of Kyle, all carefully arranged and docketed by Bishop James Kyle. And in the district all around the church there was still a thriving community of people who could trace their ancestry in the baptismal and marriage registers of Preshome back into the Penal Times and beyond.

Father Robertson joined wholeheartedly in the life of the parish. He loved visiting his scattered flock, at first tramping the roads and byways on foot and, after he had mastered the art of driving, he went about in a small car. He loved welcoming his people at church, at Preshome, at St. James', Letterfourie and later at St. Ninian's, Tynet. His early training as a school-teacher was put to good use as he catechised the Catholic children in the village school or wrote short plays for them to act at parochial gatherings in the old gallery of Preshome Church, now transformed into "St. Joseph's Room" for parochial reunions. There was, however, a source of deep unease in the happy life of those days. The depopulation of rural Scotland was steadily destroying the old traditional life-style of the countryside. Year by year more rural cottages and crofts were left derelict as their occupants sought the amenities of town life, or as young men and women moved away to seek employment in the industrial south. Father Robertson, to whom the old-fashioned rural economy was an inherited way of life, regarded such changes with profound misgiving, but it seemed to be beyond anyone's power to stop this erosion and for the time being he could only encourage his people to keep the spirit of the parish in full vigour as best they could, praying that the trend would change before it was too late.

Father Robertson had been born and brought up on a small farm at Insch in Aberdeenshire. It is difficult to imagine any place more typical of the north-east. His favourite sister, Bella, described the farm in some verses of reminiscence she sent him, in 1944, to mark a family anniversary:

It sits amang the Garioch hills
 Wi' its back turned tae the wast,
 Laigh doon, the fairm toon,
 Biggit in days lang past;
 Plane trees, rodden trees
 Shelter it fae the blast.
 Dark lies Foudlan
 Awa' owre to the north;
 Dunnideer, green and clear,
 Yonder, Tap o' Noth,
 And Bennachie, O! Bennachie,
 Purplin' a' the sooth . . .

The lovely landscape with its couthy inland farms and its neat fishing villages, the kindly people with their strong grasp of history and their broad speech, all that went to make up the north-east had been the object of his affection since childhood days, and this affection grew with the years. He loved to have an excuse for driving through the familiar countryside. He would gaily tramp miles over rough ground to visit an old church or castle, a Pictish symbol-stone or some forgotten holy well. Especially did he love the traditions of the Catholic survival in the north-east in the days of persecution. He strove to foster devotion to Blessed John Ogilvie and to Our Lady of Aberdeen and, for some years, he tried to keep alive the diocesan pilgrimage "to Our Lady of Grace in Murray land." To him the little graveyard of St. Ninian's in the Enzie was a place of quite unique sanctity. He secured a plot there, where his two sisters were buried and where he would be buried himself, among the parishioners he loved and among the great men of the past whom he admired.

Father Robertson's predecessor at Preshome, Canon Donald Mackay, early in his incumbency had been the last priest of Preshome to combine parochial work with the actual running of the farm. For many years now the two occupations had been separated, to Father Robertson's regret, for he had enjoyed in his youth guiding the plough and working with animals. However, there was another way in which he could occupy the spare time left over from parochial work and to this he turned his attention. In the late 1940s he set himself the task of examining the large collection of letters, left by Bishop James Kyle at Preshome, with the intention of compiling a full-scale biography of that admirable prelate. Patiently and carefully, through the dark winter nights, he sat at his desk, usually wrapped in a large dressing-gown, with his sheepdog Glennie, huddled at his feet for warmth, reading and making copious notes from the century-old letters by the light of a paraffin lamp. The work progressed slowly, for there were many interruptions, and unfortunately the projected biography was not quite completed before illness finally brought the task to a halt. The unfinished manuscript has, however, been deposited safely in the Scottish Catholic Archives, and it is hoped that before too long this biography of Bishop Kyle may be completed and published.

From time to time he still contributed verses to periodicals: one thinks of the accomplished Scriptural Sonnets that he contributed to St. Peter's College Magazine in 1956. Even in his hymns it was clear that his devotion and his love of the Church were firmly set in the context of the traditional rural way of life of the north-east. We catch a glimpse of this nostalgia for the vanishing rural economy in which good neighbourliness had meant so much:

O Daughter of the Nazarenes,
 Throw wide thy humble door,
 That all who sigh for vanished grace
 May share thy endless store.

Or, in his hymn to Blessed John Ogilvie, his strong love of kinsfolk and the hills of home:

Born of that race
 Whose flesh and blood we share,
 And of that place
 On earth we hold as fair:
 We would not have thee shun
 For us, one alien soul,
 But for our own loved land we cry,
 Make Scotland whole.

And, of course, there are phrases that are purely Chestertonian, as in the carol:

The Holy Child of Bethlehem
Beholds His Mother's face,
And laughs to see reflected there
His own dear gift of grace.

His skill and craftsmanship with words was well illustrated for me on a visit I paid to him in the autumn of 1955. We had been sitting talking into the early hours of the morning. Mention had been made of the medieval sequence of St. Ninian to be found in the Arbuthnott Missal:

Ave pater et patrone,
praesul, pastor, pie, bone,
confessor eximie!
Roga Deum, Niniane,
pro salute, sero, mane,
praesentis familiae . . .

Finally I took a candle and went off to bed. (Actually there was a small paraffin-driven generator which was supposed to supply the church and house with electricity, but more often than not it was out of use because it was becoming too expensive for the diminishing revenues of the parish and in any case Father Robertson's temperament was impatient of things mechanical.) I left Father Robertson at his desk in the light of his lamp. Before he retired to rest he completed the fine hymn to St. Ninian which not only translates but recaptures the whole rhythm and spirit of the fifteenth-century Latin original:

Greeting to thee, friend and father, from whose hands all good we gather,
guide we own not great as thou!
Pray to God, O blessed Ninian, that His healthful sweet dominion guard thy needy family now . . .

For a quarter of a century he remained as parish priest of Pres-home but, before the end, the infirmities of old age had crowded in on him. His memory, which had never been very good, became very erratic. The parishioners were full of sympathy and understanding. Gradually his condition grew much worse. Senility with the added complication of apparently total deafness made it practically impossible to communicate with him. The people of the parish did what they could to make him comfortable and tried to ensure that he lacked for nothing. All were glad that he was able to remain happily in his familiar surroundings. He was mercifully unaware of the sadness of his parishioners that, because of the shortage of priests in the diocese, Bishop Foylan had been forced, in January 1971, to the distressing decision that, for the time being at any rate, the ancient parish of Preshome should be served from neighbouring Buckie. So matters stood for two more years until latterly Father Robertson had to be moved to hospital in Elgin for medical attention, and there he died on the 22nd February, 1973.

He was a rare and gifted soul, whose quiet simple friendliness and piety owed much to the little Saint of Lisieux, who had been such an influence on religious thought during his early years as a Catholic. Above all else, he was devoted to the welfare of his flock in the Enzie of Banffshire because they were his own kith and kin and because, in an altogether special way, they represented that ancient faith which was the pearl of great price for which, as a young man, he had given all that he possessed. May he rest in peace.

Rev. James Anthony MacLaughlin — 11th March, 1973

Father James Anthony MacLaughlin was born in Inverness on the 13th June, 1908. Having completed his primary studies in the Franciscan Convent, Inverness, and St. Mary's, Lanark, he went to Blairs College in 1923 and then to the Scots College in Valladolid, Spain, where he was ordained priest in 1936.

His first appointment was as curate to Monsignor Paterson, and to his last day, Father Tony had tremendous respect for the great humanity and wise counsel of this great administrator. In 1945, he was appointed to the then small and distant parish of Wick, where his enthusiasm for the things of the country made him a wide circle of friends and hunting and shooting expeditions were incomplete if Father Tony was missing.

From Wick he was transferred to Peterhead, where most of his work was in the large prison there. He is still well remembered as a man, who in his capacity as prison chaplain, showed immense charity and no little toleration to that section of his congregation whose lives necessarily differed from his ordinary parishioners.

With regret the people of Peterhead saw him transferred to the Speyside parish of Aberlour. This was the heyday of Father Tony's life as far as fishing was concerned. His natural skill for this sport and his great knowledge of local conditions made him a man who was much consulted by the many visitors to the Spey valley. From Aberlour he served the small parish of Aviemore. Travelling conditions in the winter months were often well-nigh impossible, but Father Tony revelled in his struggles to reach his few parishioners and to provide Mass in the village.

His last parish was Fochabers in the County of Moray; in the area of the Enzie to which much of Scotland owes a great debt of gratitude for the many missionaries who emanated from that small pocket, where so many never lost the faith, Father Tony was very proud to be the successor of many eminent predecessors.

During the last few years of his life, Father Tony had suffered constantly from a cardiac condition, but this did little to curb his tremendous energies and he continued to serve the needs of his people with the same enthusiasm and devotion as he always had done. Non-Catholics were not slow in going to him for advice on a wide ranging variety of problems and they never left him not feeling that little bit better for his wise words.

Besides his unquestioned loyalty to the Church, Father Tony had two great loves—Blairs College and the Scots College, Valladolid. He seldom, if ever, missed the Blairs meeting, and for many years he was the driving force behind the Priests versus Students cricket match.

In 1971 he was President of the Ambrosian Society for the former students of the Scots College, Spain. During that year he went to Spain for the second centenary celebrations of the transfer of the College from Madrid to Valladolid. This visit to Spain renewed Father Tony's intellectual appetite for the great school of Spanish spirituality.

Father Tony died suddenly on 11th March, 1973, shortly after being admitted to Gray's Hospital, Elgin. There was a concelebrated Mass in St. Mary's, Fochabers, at which Bishop Foylan was principal concelebrant with his brother, Monsignor Tom McLaughlin and many other priests also concelebrating.

On the following day, the body was buried beside those of his parents in Lanark. Father Tony was a priest who will be long remembered in the many far-flung places in the north of Scotland where he gave such unstinted service for the good of the people. His ordination enthusiasms never wavered until he was called home. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Bernard Ashworth — 31st March, 1973

Father Bernard Joseph Bartley Ashworth was born at Upper Norwood, near London, on the 1st December, 1890, the only son and fifth child in a family of six. Two of his sisters, Lucy and Mary, became enclosed nuns in St. Mary's Dominican Priory at Carisbrooke in the Isle of Wight.

He went to school at St. Mary's, Woolhampton, near Reading, now Douai Abbey and School. In 1914 he left his work in the Law Courts to join the army and became an officer in the gunners. He was invalided out in 1918 as the consequence of a poison gas bomb which blinded him for three days and left his chest permanently affected. The following year he married Eva Battersby, the close friend of his youngest sister, Mary, and set up house at Harrow-on-the-Hill near his parents, having by this time resumed his work at the Law Courts. One of his children, Ruth, joined the Sisters of La Retraite. His wife died in 1955 and on the 7th October, 1956, he entered the Beda College in Rome to begin his studies for the priesthood, having been accepted for the diocese of Aberdeen by the then bishop, the Right Rev. Francis Walsh. He was ordained to the priesthood in the Lateran Basilica by Cardinal Luigi Traglia, the Vicegerent of Rome, on the 2nd April, 1960, and said his first Mass at the La Retraite convent. He was then in his seventieth year. In October of that year he started work at St. Peter's, Aberdeen. St. Peter's was a small parish and the work was not burdensome. He took a delight in visiting, particularly the old and infirm. His sermons, though brief, were always to the point.

The time came when St. Peter's no longer required the services of two priests, so, when the parish of Braemar became vacant on the death of Canon Alexander Kerr on the 30th June, 1962, Father Ashworth was appointed to succeed him. It was a short interlude, barely a few weeks. Braemar stands at a thousand feet and the altitude began to aggravate his chest complaint, which had been a constant trouble to him, with the consequence that he was compelled to leave.

On the 19th September, 1962, he came as chaplain to Nazareth House, Aberdeen. These were very happy years for him and there he was to remain until his death in hospital in Aberdeen on the 31st March, 1973, in his eighty-third year. The funeral Mass was said in the chapel of Nazareth House by the bishop of the diocese, the Right Rev. Michael Foylan, in the presence of his family and friends, and his body was laid to rest in the old churchyard of St. Ninian's in the Enzie where so many priests of the north-east lie awaiting a blessed resurrection.

Bernard Ashworth was one of the most unassuming of men. His motto could have been Ama nesciri et pro nihilo reputari. He had come late to the priesthood, but nothing was more evident than his devotion to the Mass. In the years at Nazareth House he had sometimes to drag himself to the altar and painfully to recite the words of consecration. But a day without Mass was a wasted day for him. When the austere climate of the north became too much for him, he loved to stay with his family, and no visitor to his room ever left it without being invited to admire the latest photographs of his grandchildren. But at the same time he delighted in the spiritual family he had acquired, the children and the old folk of Nazareth House and the Sisters who were proud to tend him and who looked after him so devotedly when he could scarce gasp for breath. They remember him especially, as all who knew him remember him, as one of the kindest and most considerate of men, always alert to do service to others, as one whose native goodness and courtesy blossomed under divine grace into the flower of Christian charity. May his gentle soul rest in peace.

Rev. Charles Valley — 16th April, 1973

Fr. Valley was born in Cleland on 22nd April, 1916. He was educated at St. Mary's, Cleland, St. Mary's, Whifflet, and Our Lady's High School, Motherwell. He studied at St. Peter's College, Bearsden, from 1934 to 1941. He was ordained in St. Andrew's Cathedral, Glasgow, and received his first appointment to St. Charles', Kelvin-side. He was there until 1942, when he was transferred to St. Francis Xavier's, Carfin, where he remained until 1945. He then moved to St. Joseph's, North Woodside Road, until 1954 when he went to St. Roch's. In 1962 he became Master of Ceremonies in St. Andrew's Cathedral. In 1966 he was appointed to be the first parish priest of the newly formed parish of St. Peter's, Dumbarton. There he remained until his sudden death on 16th April, 1973.

Amongst his many duties, he was a member of the Diocesan Liturgical Commission, archdiocesan representative on Dunbarton Education Authority and a Governor of Notre Dame College of Education.

To those of us who knew Fr. Valley well, Bishop Winning in his panegyric gave an excellent summing-up of the qualities that endeared him to us. He was "all things to all men."

Amongst my recollections is my proud boast that so many priests and people said to me: "But, of course, he was a great friend of yours"—as indeed he was.

I first met him when he came from St. Charles', Kelvinside, to Carfin, where three of us—Fr. Gerard Hart, Fr. Valley and myself—were jocularly known among the clergy as "the Commandos" because of our special mission in that part of the archdiocese.

He brought a sense of dedication and a sense of humour which were greatly appreciated by us. He had a great sense of calmness and a great love for the people of his district. When he visited them in their homes (which was very often), he made them feel at ease. A parishioner from Carfin told me (thirty years later) how they loved to have him in their home. He was like this all during his life.

He was a traditionalist, yet modern up to a point—the "happy mean." He brought one down to earth with his advice and observations. As the song says, he was "a bridge over troubled waters." He could read a person and sum him up perfectly.

Fr. Valley was always the priest. He worked hard, yet he could relax on holiday and at other times of recreation, but always servatis servandis—in fact, he was an ideal type for us to follow.

He had a great regard and respect for all things pertaining to the Church. This was especially shown in his demeanour as Master of Ceremonies, based in St. Andrew's Cathedral, when he moved about his business quietly and efficiently. As senior curate in St. Joseph's and St. Roch's, he was the perfect mediator, with a sense of fairness for all.

Fr. Hart and I used to think at times that we had some influence in his training, but on reflection, it was he who helped us in our priestly lives. He always wanted us to call in and see him when we were passing the old presbytery of St. Peter's. What a delight it was. He made us happy. We may often say this kind of thing, but here it is said with conviction: Fr. Valley is praying for us in heaven.

The No. 44 bus was the one that commuted between Glasgow and Cleland, passing through Carfin. To me it was the bus to Glasgow, but to Fr. Valley it was the bus to Cleland. We used to joke about this, but it was indicative. He was a home-loving man. Indeed, he had his Silver Jubilee celebrations in Cleland, when I had the honour of preaching. In the Book of Leviticus, it says: "In the year of jubilee let every man return to his own country." So indeed he did. And now for his real Jubilee he has returned to his real Fatherland. May he rest there in peace.

Rev. Wilfrid Davis — 20th April, 1973

Father Wilfrid Davis was born at Crosshill, Glasgow, on the 5th September, 1905, and baptised in Holy Cross Church. His early schooling was received at St. Columbcille's, Rutherglen, until 1917, when the family came north to Foyers in Inverness-shire, in the parish of Stratherrick, then in charge of Father Aeneas Geddes. In August of the following year he went to St. Mary's College, Blairs; and thence in 1923 for a year to the Petit Séminaire of Avranches in Normandy. He completed his studies for the priesthood at Issy-les-Moulineaux. He never lost his love for France and continued all during his life a devoted member of the French Society and for fifteen years its secretary.

Returning to Scotland, he was ordained by Bishop George Bennett in the chapel of Blairs College on the 14th June, 1930. The following day he said his first Mass at the little church of Foyers, which had been built five years previously by Father Bernard Manders, a church that is no longer used. That same year he went to Buckie which up to that time had been served by one priest. The incumbent was Canon Charles Macdonald. The new curate found himself with very little to occupy his time and it was a relief to him to be transferred in 1933 to the populous parish of St. Peter's, Aberdeen. He there won the affection of the youth and took a special interest in the Dramatic Club which, under his guidance, reached a level of performance unscaled hitherto.

The time came when he was entrusted with a parish of his own. It comprised Orkney and Shetland, with a house in Kirkwall. It was a lonely outpost of the diocese, even though Kirkwall was a town of four thousand inhabitants, lonely in this sense that he had a mere handful of Catholics to minister to and that he was separated by a waste of seas from the nearest priest at Wick in Caithness. He went to Kirkwall in 1938. The following year the town was transformed. War was declared and Father Davis found himself for some considerable time acting as chaplain to the Army and Navy personnel at Scapa Flow and elsewhere. He continued in Kirkwall all during the war years. It is due to him that a canteen for the Forces was set up by the Catholic Women's League. He used to recall a graffito scrawled on the wall of the canteen: "Pray for the repose of the soul of so-and-so bored to death after three months in Orkney."

In 1946 he succeeded Monsignor William Clapperton, rector of the Scots College in Rome, at Banff. In 1953, he removed to Dingwall where he gathered funds for the replacement of the hut at Invergordon which had served for Mass. His next and final appointment was to Nairn in May, 1961, where he remained until his fatal illness. Those years at Banff, Dingwall and Nairn were years of quiet, unostentatious and devoted service. He had plans for the renovation of the church at Nairn but ill-health intervened and, on the 19th December, 1972, he was admitted to Raigmore Hospital, Inverness, and to the "way of the cross". There was a congested ward and no privacy: there was a long drawn out agony, patiently and courageously borne, and two major operations, to the second of which he succumbed. On Good Friday, the 20th April, 1973, he passed to his Maker. He was sixty-seven years old. The Requiem Mass, concelebrated by the bishop of the diocese and twelve of his priests, was said at St. Mary's, Nairn, on the following Tuesday in the presence of a crowded congregation. Bishop Foylan preached the panegyric. By his own express wish Father Davis was buried in his parents' grave in Allenvale Cemetery, Aberdeen.

These are the facts of his life. It was a life like that of almost any priest in this northern diocese, one which does not make the headlines. Father Wilfrid was a quiet, unassuming, shy man. He never courted the limelight. He was content to remain in nidulo suo and only twice during his years on the mission is he known to have taken a holiday. Blairs gave him a taste for reading which he never lost. While in his mature years he acquired a passion for classical music. But his greatest delight was in the company of his fellow priests, and notably, in a monthly meeting when four of them foregathered for the day at Forres. The Aberdeen clergy showed their confidence in him by electing him secretary of the Friendly Society and continuing him in that office for the space of twenty-five years. In his turn he produced minutes which, by their turn of phrase and quiet humour, were a joy to listen to.

In the end Father Wilfrid was privileged to follow closely in the footsteps of his Master and to drink his cup. May the Passion of Our Lord Jesus Christ and the prayers of Our Lady and the other saints that have stood beside his cross, win for him eternal rest.

Very Reverend Thomas Canon Brooks — 2nd May, 1973

The Very Reverend Thomas Canon Brooks was born at Taughmacconnell, Co. Roscommon, on the 18th September, 1902. He was educated at St. Joseph's, Ballinasloe and St. Kieran's, Kilkenny, where he was ordained for the Archdiocese of Glasgow, on the 12th June, 1927. His first appointment was to the parish of the Holy Family, Mossend, where he was to remain for seventeen years and where he began, apart from a short interlude in St. Mary's, Greenock, from 1943 to 1947, an association with the County of Lanark and its people which was to span the rest of his life. From Greenock he returned to St. Bride's, Bothwell as parish priest in 1947, was transferred to St. David's, Whiterigg, in 1949, to St. Bride's, East Kilbride, in 1952, to St. Patrick's, Shotts, in 1955 and finally to St. Bartholomew's, Coatbridge, in 1965, from which he retired in 1969.

Canon Brooks' friends believed that it was during his stay in Mossend that his priestly character was formed and he emerged with his great knowledge and love, sympathy and concern for our people. Mossend then covered a very large area and was a melting pot for Irish, Polish and Lithuanian immigrants, striving to make their way in a hostile environment. Their struggle was not easy during the depression of the 'twenties and 'thirties when poverty, hunger and unemployment were rife and there existed no benign welfare state to support them. During this period, Fr. Brooks learned to be an understanding pastor who lived to ensure that his people, so materially depressed and deprived, were at least spiritually served and elevated and that if they felt they were living in an alien community, at least in their church and parish and priest they could feel that they belonged. Until he died he could remember vividly the individuals of the parish, their fathers and mothers and children—could still hear confessions in Lithuanian—could still recount tales of five hours "in the box" on his own, and four Masses on a Sunday to meet the needs of the people (long before many theologians had thought of that pastoral reason for justifying such a course), could tell of hours spent visiting his parishioners in their homes and seeing and appreciating their very real difficulties and struggles. Surely the host of fine men and women which this area has produced is in some way due to his seventeen years' work in their midst.

The character and attitudes forged in Mossend remained throughout his life as a priest and were the distinguishing marks of his pastoral care for the people for whom he worked. He never forgot anyone with whom he had had personal contact. He showed great appreciation for the difficulties of ordinary people, was slow to condemn their faults and quick to praise their goodness and achievements at every level, and always marvelled at the long way the Catholic community had progressed. The people of Lanarkshire should be complimented by the fact that when the time came for him to retire, he decided not to make his home in his native Ireland which he loved, but in his adopted Lanarkshire "where all my friends are."

If he was truly a priest of the people, he was also a priest for priests. No one knew more priests or was kinder to all priests. For a priest to appear at Tom's door was no intrusion, and his voice and laugh soon made the stranger feel welcome. He had so many priest friends that his problem was how to include all of them at his various celebrations. It is well remembered that on the fortieth anniversary of his Ordination, so many priest friends attended that the meal had to be served in the parochial hall, and even after he retired it was not unusual on a Sunday evening for as many as twelve priests to be congregated around the feet (or the hands) of the master. There have been a lot of Sunday-night-orphans since Canon Brooks died. It is difficult to analyse his drawing power, but certainly it had something to do with his innate kindness and goodliness, his keen interest and insight into all his friends, and his non-judgemental charity. What Dr. Johnson said of someone else could surely be applied to the Canon—that he was so perfect a man that even when you fell out with him you could not think of anything bad to say about him. All of us have learned something from his charity and generosity and all of us have benefited from his native shrewdness and caution.

After a fairly short illness he died at St. Mary's Hospital, Lanark, on the 2nd of May, 1973, and was buried from the Cathedral at Motherwell. The city of Siena has written on its gates, "COR MAGIS SENA PANDIT," which is surely a fitting epitaph for the life of Canon Brooks. May he rest in peace.

Very Reverend James George Canon Harold — 10th May, 1973

On the morning of Thursday, 10th May, 1973, as he prepared to say Mass at the Sacred Heart convent of the Little Sisters of the Poor at Raheny, Dublin, the Very Reverend James G. Canon Harold, a retired priest of the archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, collapsed and died. He was in his seventy-sixth year. For half a century, Canon Harold had served in parishes all over the archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh. In particular, he had been the founder parish priest of Cardenden, Fife, where he was responsible for the building of the new church of St. Ninian, Bowhill, in 1932.

The obsequies were held at the convent of the Little Sisters of the Poor at Raheny on Saturday, 12th May, 1973. Twenty priests concelebrated the Requiem Mass, with Bishop James Monaghan, vicar-general of the archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, as principal concelebrant. Present at the Mass was the Right Reverend Anthony McFeely, bishop of Raphoe, a relative of the late Canon. The following panegyric was preached by Bishop Monaghan:

"It is not given to everyone to continue throughout a long life, such as Canon Harold enjoyed, such zest and enthusiasm, and that in spite of the fact that he never enjoyed good health. Those of us who have had the privilege of knowing him over a long number of years can testify to the fact that the things that really interested him and set him on fire right to the end, were anything and everything to do with God, the Church, our Faith and its practice. He was so single-minded himself, he found it hard to understand those who could not see it in the same, simple, straightforward way.

“ Canon Harold's birth at Kelliegordon in Co. Donegal takes us back to the end of the last century (1897). Next month, on the 16th June, he would have been seventy-six years of age. After his primary education in the local school, he went to St. Columb's College in Derry, and on the 6th September, 1918, he entered St. Kieran's College to study for the priesthood. He was ordained a priest on the 15th June, 1922. Like so many Irish priests of his time and of the years that followed, he came to work in Scotland in the archdiocese of St. Andrews and Edinburgh. We, in Scotland, appreciate the valiant and apostolic work carried out in our midst by so many priests, then and now, who like Canon Harold, came to work in our country. The Church in our country would never have been built up to the state it now enjoys but for the unselfish, dedicated hard work of priests like Canon Harold. It is not often we get the opportunity to express this gratitude, and I am happy to have this chance to do so today on Irish soil.

“ His first appointment was, very fittingly, to St. Patrick's parish in Edinburgh. He worked in the parishes of Kilsyth in Stirlingshire (1923) and Cardenden (1928) and Kirkcaldy (1934) in Fife. Life in those days, in such mining areas as these, was not easy. In 1938 he was appointed parish priest of Peebles. He was there throughout the war years, and it was in this parish that he established strong bonds of friendship with the Polish community that continued throughout the years. The Poles had a high regard for him and looked on him as their special friend. In 1953 he went to the parish of St. Ninian in Edinburgh, and in 1954 his loyalty and hard work was recognised by his appointment as a canon of the Archdiocesan Chapter. In 1958 he went to Musselburgh, and many of us will long remember the happy golden jubilee celebrations there last year. It was then, too, that he faced up to the hard decision of retirement—a decision that must be hard for anyone, but particularly for one with such lively and active interests such as he had. He came here to this beautiful residence at the beginning of the year and very quickly endeared himself to the Sisters and the old people. A pity he did not get longer to enjoy it, but such was God's will. He appreciated the care and attention of the Sisters, and the proof of this lies in his own request that he be buried from the chapel and in the Sisters' cemetery. I am told that he also had in mind the fact that he knew some of his Scottish friends would want to come to his funeral, and Dublin would be easier than more obviously appropriate places such as Donegal. A great gesture of consideration from a priest who thought nothing of undertaking long journeys to be at the funeral of any fellow-priest. Though it has of necessity, to take place on rather an awkward day for priests, it is nice that so many of us priests from Edinburgh have managed to come. We are deeply grateful to Reverend Mother and Sisters for their very kind and generous hospitality. But those of us who have come are but a token of the many who would have liked to be here. His Eminence the Cardinal has asked me to represent him and to express his sympathy and assurance of his prayers to his brother and sisters and relatives. Were it not for the fact that he is only slowly recovering from an illness, he would most certainly have been here. His Grace the Archbishop of Glasgow, Archbishop Scanlan, who is in fact related to Canon Harold's family, also phoned me yesterday and asked me to represent him and express his sympathy and his great regret that he is unable to be here. He, too, is just recovering from an illness and not fully back in harness.

"We cannot hope in a few short minutes to pay fitting tribute to a priest whose days and weeks and months and years were crowded with activities and lively interests, but yet who always found time for his prayers. In the kindest of ways, I have a strong suspicion that things will be getting stirred up a bit in Heaven since his arrival there. We pray that Our Lady, to whom he was so devoted, and all those who have gone before him in the priesthood, will welcome him into their midst. May he rest in peace."

Rev. John Gerard Murphy — 16th May, 1973

It is with the deepest regret that we must record here the death of Father John Gerard Murphy, curate at St. Teresa's, Dundee, in the diocese of Dunkeld, which took place in Maryfield Hospital, Dundee, on Wednesday, the 16th May, 1973, in the thirty-second year of his age and the eighth of his priesthood.

Father Murphy was born in Dundee on the 31st January, 1942, the feast of St. John Bosco. Son of F. J. Murphy, late headmaster of the old St. Andrew's Primary School, Long Wynd, and Mrs. Rose M. Murphy, now headmistress of St. Vincent's Infants' School, he came from a long line of people who had devoted their lives to Catholic Education in Scotland. Baptised in St. Joseph's, Dundee, by his priest uncle, Father John Cleary, he received his early education in St. Joseph's Primary School. From an early age he showed a desire for the priesthood and entered St. Mary's College, Blairs, when he was eleven to pursue his studies. From there he passed to the Royal Scots College, Valladolid, in 1959, and on the completion there of the usual six years course of studies he was raised to the priesthood in St. Andrew's Cathedral, Dundee, on the feast of Saints Peter and Paul, 29th June, 1965, by His Lordship Bishop William A. Hart. He was appointed assistant priest to Mgr. Stuart, V.G., at St. Leonard's, Dundee, and his successor, Father John J. Connelly. It was at St. Leonard's that he spent the greatest part of his priestly life until transferred to St. Teresa's in September 1972, where he remained until his death.

The keynote of John Murphy's character was his simplicity and integrity. Though adult and experienced by all the varying circumstances of the priestly life, he nevertheless retained throughout his years a childlike innocence. There was no guile nor deceit in him. The complexity of motive and outlook or calculation, which form, unfortunately, so much part of most of us, found little part in his mental make-up and it was this God-given quality that endeared him to all that came into contact with him. Those who knew him will long remember his humility and self-effacement, his gentleness and piety, but above all his ardent desire to take his place always as an active priest and do his work for the salvation of souls.

It was his priestliness and sense of the priesthood, with all its responsibilities, that inspired him throughout his too short life. He had made his choice as a young boy of eleven to devote himself to the things of God and the good of souls, and nothing or no-one was ever really given precedence over these principles. In this was the secret of his success with people. The young, not very surprisingly, had a very large place in his interest and affection. From a long line of Catholic educationalists he wished to give the young of the schools committed to his care—St. Margaret's, St. Columba's, St. John's, Lawside Academy and finally St. Michael's—the same solid basis of Catholic learning and piety that had been his from his family home and training. Nothing was too much trouble to him for the children, whether it was the preparation of catechetical lessons, projects, or his class Masses; and this evident care for his young charges will have made a lasting impression. As one tearful pupil put it on the day of his school Requiem Mass, "He would always listen to you"—a very commendable trait to the young!

At the same time he was a man's man. Never happier than when climbing in his leisure hours and holidays the mountain peaks of his native Scotland where he used to say, "Man can find God," he had a wide interest in the things of the male adult world. Photography, sport, car-maintenance, music and painting each exercised a formative and absorbing part in his free time. But perhaps the hobby dearest to him was his model railway and interest in all things concerning steam trains. This had a real fascination for him; begun in childhood, it remained with him right to the last week of his life when he passed his solitary hours in planning and preparing a new and bigger model of his trains for his room.

For two years Father Murphy had suffered from a blood complaint which at times caused him great pain. This long illness was patiently borne, his distress often being so concealed from even his closest friends that few were aware of the true situation. During this time he was desperately anxious lest he be thought of as an invalid and pushed himself to the limits of his energy and was finally compelled to enter hospital to seek relief from his complaint. Even there his only complaint to his parish priest was his regret at not being able to take his share in the parish life. A measure of his keen sense of priestly duty can be seen in his rising from bed to take part in the Holy Thursday and Good Friday services in his parish church—only a few days before his final illness. The severe course of treatment that he had been undergoing from December, 1972 had the unfortunate side effect of lowering his resistance to infection. This was a calculated risk taken in the hope that he would eventually be restored to his previous good health; but it was not to be. Stricken with pneumonia, he entered Maryfield Hospital for the last time on Saturday, 12th May. Hopes were high for yet another recovery, but as the days went on he became more and more tired. On Wednesday, 16th May, 1973, John Gerard Murphy, with characteristic composure and dignity, gave his truly priestly soul back to its Maker.

“How rich are the depths of God—how deep His wisdom and knowledge, and how impossible to penetrate His motives or understand His methods.” How appropriate these words of St. Paul come to mind! At a young age, in the fullness of vigour, the Lord has taken him from a loving family and a diocese already in sore need of priests of his like, but perhaps those who so deeply mourn his passing may find a final message and consolation in what he wrote in his spiritual notes at the beginning of his priestly life: “As priests we are God’s representatives here on earth. We are the fathers of the children and so we should take special care to be kind and reliable. We should be ‘professional kind men.’ We should not rule with a military authority or as though we were schoolmasters; neither as Victorian fathers, but as Jesus Christ—kind, gentle, patient and meek. We are celibate, we have given up the right to have a particular family in order that we may elevate our love and extend it to a whole parish and be a true father to the people.”

Knowing that John Murphy more than practised what he wrote, can we really mourn his passing? Can we really grudge his going to God whom he loved and served so well for the whole of his life? Are we not sorry for our loss in his death rather than thinking of the eternal reward that is now his for his fidelity when in life? He also wrote, “God is a mystery. His ways are inexplicable and so faith must play a great part in our lives. It will be the driving force even when the commands seem absurd.” God’s command to Father Murphy to leave this world may seem to many left behind, absurd. With him let them say, “Thy will be done.” With his going all have lost a something very personal; a loving and devoted son, a dedicated and loyal priest, an ideal assistant, a firm, lovable friend, full of affection and human warmth, but all have gained yet one more powerful advocate in Heaven. “Consummatus in brevi, explevit tempora multa” (Wisdom 4, 13). (Coming to perfection in so short a while, he achieved long life.)

Father Murphy was received into Dundee’s Cathedral, St. Andrew’s, on Thursday evening by the Right Rev. H. Stuart, V.G., his first parish priest, in the absence of Bishop Hart, engaged at that time in Brussels on important Church affairs with the European Common Market bishops. Before a crowded congregation, Requiem Mass was celebrated by Father John B. Hanlon, parish priest of St. Teresa's, Dundee, the last scene of Father Murphy's labours in the diocese of Dunkeld, who conveyed to the sorrowing family the deep and heart-relt sympathy of all sections of the community in their, and the priests of the diocese, loss.

The next day Solemn Requiem Mass was concelebrated, the principal celebrant being Father Cleary who had baptised him thirty-one years ago. An eloquent testimony of Father Murphy's popularity and how people appreciated him was shown by the fact that not all who came to the Cathedral to pay their last respects could find a place and had to remain in the porch and even outside on the streets. The Provost and Chapter of the Dunkeld Diocese and over seventy priests attended, many of them being his former friends at Blairs and Valladolid. The overflowing congregation represented all aspects of life in the city of Dundee.

In the congregation were Father Murphy's mother, Mrs. Rose M. Murphy, headmistress of St. Vincent's Infants' School, his sister Dr. Rosemary Pye and brother-in-law, Dr. Ian Pye from England. The principal celebrant of the Mass was Father John Cleary of the Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Leamington Spa, who had baptised Father Murphy thirty-one years ago in St. Joseph's. With him were joined Mgr. Stuart, V.G., Fr. Connelly, Fr. Hanlon, Fr. Adamson, Fr. Ward, and Fr. McDermott.

The Very Rev. Provost John B. Malloy, parish priest of St. Joseph's, the scene of Fr. Murphy's early life, spoke on behalf of the bishop and clergy of the diocese. For him the crowded cathedral of that morning and the evening previous showed the esteem in which Father Murphy was held by all. Referring to the readings of the Requiem Mass, the Provost reminded the prayerful assembly that it was not the years that made a man's life but what a man did with them. All are in the world to love and serve God. This is our duty and our privilege, and during his short priestly years Father Murphy had more than proved to all his absorbing love for his Saviour. Though saddened by his death, his life and example would be an inspiration for many years to come. As priest in St. Leonard's and St. Teresa's, he had spent himself for the good of souls. The sick, the elderly and, above all, the children, all had had a place in his affection and interest. His Mass and sermons, prepared with a thoroughness beyond his years, had been for the sanctification of those placed under his charge. These souls would surely remember him now before the throne of God whom he had served so well on earth.

Father Murphy was borne from the cathedral by his contemporary friends in the diocese. The Nethergate was crowded with people lining both sides of the street giving a last proud farewell to a loved and respected priest and friend. Father Cleary officiated at Balgay Cemetery where Father Murphy was laid to rest beside his beloved father. May his fine priestly soul rest in his Lord.

28th May, 1973

The Right Rev. Mgr. Thomas Provost McLaughlin, the second son in a family of ten, was born at the Cameron Barracks, Inverness, on the 5th May, 1891. He received his early schooling at Roy Bridge, where his father had been posted to help raise the Lovat Scouts, at the High School, Inverness, and at St. Mary's College, Blairs. He entered Blairs in August, 1905, and became decano. In October, 1910, he went to the Scots College, Rome, where he completed the usual course of studies for the priesthood and was ordained by Cardinal Basilio Pompili, the Cardinal-Vicar of Rome, in the basilica of St. John Lateran on the 10th August, 1917. He gained in Rome a double doctorate in philosophy and theology.

On his return to Scotland he was for a short spell at St. Mary's Cathedral, Aberdeen, and then at St. Peter's, Justice Street, Aberdeen, where he entered on his pastoral duties with characteristic and tireless energy in a happy partnership, first with Father George Grant and then, on his return from war service, with Father Andrew Grant. His first parish was Banff to which he was appointed in 1923 and where he remained for almost five years. In 1927 he returned to Aberdeen to take charge of the small community of St. Joseph's, Woodside, on which he was to lavish his care for the next twenty-four years. It was a small congregation then, which the overspill from the east end of the city had hardly affected, and it was desperately poor. The parish income in 1925 was barely £120. But Father Tom's needs (everyone knew him as Father Tom) were small, he lived austere all his life, and he settled down contentedly to tend his little flock, it may be somewhat disappointed when he was passed over and others preferred to more flourishing parishes, but he never repined. It was not in his nature to be inactive and his energies found an outlet in many directions; first of all, in acquainting himself with the people of Woodside, Catholic and non-Catholic alike, for whom he had always a cheery wave of the hand or a friendly word of greeting. If a priest is to be judged by the impression he makes on the whole community around him, then Father Tom earned full marks during his stay in Woodside. No wonder, then, that when he was transferred to Aboyne, the neighbours in Tanfield Walk spontaneously clubbed together to present him with a parting gift.

Further, there was his work as diocesan inspector of schools, as secretary of the National Council of the Association for the Propagation of the Faith which was then in its inception, as confessor to Blairs College. He reorganised the local branch of the Catholic Truth Society when Aberdeen woke up to the presence in its midst of a writer like Hilaire Belloc and a liturgical scholar of the stamp of Abbot Cabrol.

Time passed and war was declared. In 1940, Father Tom was appointed chaplain to the R.A.F. at Dyce Airport, to the Naval Hospital at Kingseat, Newmachar, and to the Gordon Barracks at the Bridge of Don while, for a short time, a Polish Army camp in Old Aberdeen engaged his care and attention. It was a gruelling experience which, even though helped out by priests from Blairs College and an occasional visiting chaplain, no one could have borne except one of his splendid constitution and devotion to duty. He delighted in it. No one needed to say to him as Eliza Doolittle said: "Words, words, words. I am sick of words. Show me!"

With the end of the war, life became easier and more so when, in 1952, Bishop Walsh transferred him to Aboyne, in which year he was appointed to the Cathedral Chapter. St. Joseph's, Woodside, missed him, but his removal to Deeside did nothing to diminish the warmth of his feeling for the new flock entrusted to him. He was then sixty-one. In 1959 he became provost of the Cathedral Chapter. A diminishing congregation at Aboyne suggested his removal in 1962 to Banchory to be within easy reach of the great majority of his congregation which was there rapidly increasing. It was at Banchory, in Corsee Cottage, that his remaining years were spent, instructing the children of the surrounding countryside, fulfilling all his pastoral duties, regaling his congregation with his inimitable talks, right from the heart and with a wealth of instruction, saying Sunday Mass both at Banchory and Aboyne, twelve miles distant, almost to the very end. In 1967 he celebrated his golden jubilee and in September of that same year the Holy Father crowned his long ministry by appointing him a prelate of honour.

Failing health forced him to lay down the harness and he finally retired in March 1973. Few priests can have continued in active service as he did, unaided, for the long space of fifty-six years. The death of his brother, Father Tony, on the 11th March, was a severe blow to him and precipitated his end. He was admitted to Woodend Hospital, Aberdeen, and died there on the 28th May. The funeral Mass was said by the bishop of the diocese, Bishop Michael Foylan, in St. Mary's Cathedral, Aberdeen, on the 30th May and, next day, Father Tom found a last resting place on earth in the family grave in St. Mary's Cemetery, Lanark.

God had given Monsignor McLaughlin many gifts: a keen mind, a retentive memory, a racy utterance, a compassionate heart, a strong physique. He brought life to every social gathering and no one could be bored in his company. His fund of stories was endless and, if they did not all satisfy the canons of historical accuracy, they were always first-class entertainment, frequently edifying and never unkind. He had a knowledge of the past history of the diocese and of priests dead and gone which was without rival, and no one knew better than he did how to bring that past to life. Blairs had a special place in his affections and there must have been very few meetings of the Blairs Society, if any at all, at which that unmistakable voice was not to be heard. His spiritual life is known only to himself and his Creator. But his devotion to Our Lord and to his Mother and to the saints was obvious. He spoke of them naturally and unashamedly as he did about the Blessed Sacrament, because they were real to him, he lived with them, he was at home with them. His spiritual life was centred each day on his celebration of Mass and, almost to the end, he struggled to the altar. His rubrics may not have all been post-Vatican II but his devotion was manifest. Those who knew him in the confessional never came away without an uplifting of the heart; to the troubled in mind, the scrupulous, the bereaved, he was a tower of strength.

Of course he was only human and he had his faults. As with many others of a warm and outgoing disposition, he was quick-tempered. He could flare up and cross words with a fellow priest or with a parishioner. But soon he would be shaking hands, patting the other on the back, and once more conversing as if nothing untoward had happened.

Father Tom had friends the world over, and it was a standing joke with us that, whoever you mentioned, Tom had a link with them. But his closest links were with his family, his parents to whom he was devoted, his brothers and sisters, and especially the sister who kept house for him and looked after him from his strenuous middle-age to his declining years and during the last few months which were all the retirement he knew. At work until well on into his eighty-third year, he fought many a good fight, he kept the faith, and his Master has now surely given him a crown of glory. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Jeremiah Lane — 29th May, 1973

On Tuesday, 29th May, 1973, the Archdiocese of Glasgow lost one of its most courageous priests with the death of the Rev. Jeremiah Lane. He died in St. Paul's Convent, Clonakilty, Co. Cork, where he had been ill for the past fifteen years after his retirement.

Fr. Lane was born into farming stock in Donoughmore, Co. Cork, on the 10th December, 1917. After his early education he expressed the desire of trying his vocation to the priesthood, and proceeded to St. Colman's College, Fermoy, from which he went on to the senior seminary, St. Kieran's, Kilkenny. Here he was ordained by the Bishop of Ossory, Dr. Collier, on the 6th June, 1943, for the Archdiocese of Glasgow.

Fr. Lane's first appointment was to St. Patrick's in Anderston. He spent only a few months there, but people still remember with affection the newly-ordained young Irish priest who started his life in their parish.

From Glasgow he was transferred to St. Joseph's parish in Helensburgh, where he was to remain for nine years. These were probably the happiest and most fruitful years of his life. In the latter days of the war, in addition to his normal duties, he acted as chaplain to the Armed Forces. This was for him a very satisfying and challenging work of charity. The people of Helensburgh took Fr. Lane to their hearts. His youth, his devotion, his energy and good example endeared him to all.

Among his many human qualities, one of the most salient was his quick and ready wit. He had a very piquant sense of humour as well, and it is unfortunate that most young priests of the archdiocese did not know him, since he retired very early in life.

At the beginning of 1952, Fr. Lane moved from Helensburgh to nearby Alexandria—the parish of Our Lady and St. Mark. Here, after a short spell, the signs of his serious illness began to show themselves. He had become a victim of that most distressing of all crippling diseases, disseminated sclerosis. Many tests and examinations ensued, all endured with great courage and spirit. In spite of his wonderful efforts and his fight against odds, his illness so progressed that he had to retire from active ministry in the archdiocese. In May 1958, after six years of admirable service in St. Mark's, Fr. Lane returned to his native Cork where, in Clonakilty, the Sisters of St. Paul welcomed him into their convent.

For fifteen years he lingered there with loving attention from the good nuns. There he died in May of this year after his long illness and patient suffering.

The Solemn Requiem Mass for the repose of his soul was concelebrated at Stuaque Church, Donoughmore. The chief concelebrant was Monsignor Canon Ward, Vicar General of Glasgow, representing His Grace the Archbishop. Other concelebrants from Scotland were the Very Reverend James Canon Meehan of Helensburgh; Rev. Patrick Dinneen of St. Margaret Mary's, Castlemilk; and Rev. James Reilly of Alexandria. The interment took place in Donoughmore, his native soil.

In Alexandria, his last Scottish parish, Holy Mass was offered for the repose of Fr. Lane's soul on Saturday, 2nd June, 1973. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Gerard Lord — 7th June, 1973

On the 7th June, 1973, Fr. Gerard Lord died in Dublin. For forty-four years he was a priest of the Archdiocese of Glasgow and virtually unknown to the present generation of clergy.

Born in Co. Dublin on the 18th December, 1902, he was educated at Belvedere College and the National University, Dublin, and at the age of twenty-one offered himself as a candidate for the priesthood in Glasgow. He was accepted and entered St. Peter's College, Bearsden in 1924 and was ordained in St. Andrew's Cathedral on the 29th June, 1929, by Archbishop Mackintosh.

His was a tragic life; his first appointment was to St. Patrick's, Shieldmuir, and he enjoyed it for only a few short weeks. One morning, while bringing Holy Communion to the sick, he took a short cut which was used regularly by local people over the railway lines. He was struck by a train and the accident cost him his left arm. This was the most permanent of the injuries he suffered, and for many years he was a complete invalid. By sheer persistence he acquired sufficient dexterity in the use of an artificial substitute and was able to offer Mass again in public in 1938. He appealed to be allowed to return to the diocese for pastoral work, and was appointed to St. Mary's, Duntocher. Two years later, after many heartbreaks, he finally gave up the struggle of carrying out parochial duties and very reluctantly retired to Ireland. He lived in Dublin for thirty-three years in retirement, but he was by no means inactive. He was able to assist the local priest by offering public Mass in the parish church, and it was a great delight to him to meet the visitors from Glasgow during the summer months. Early in 1973 his health, which had been so indifferent all during the years since the accident, finally collapsed, and after a fairly long and serious illness he was called to his eternal reward. A Requiem Mass was offered for him in St. Mary's, Duntocher, by Bishop Ward on Friday, 22nd June. The congregation numbered several hundred. Although thirty-three years had passed since he left St. Mary's, he was still remembered there with deep affection. He lies buried in Ireland. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Thomas Egan — 2nd July, 1973

Fr. Thomas Egan died in Ireland on 2nd July, 1973. He was a man of few words at any time, but still more so on the subject of himself. Consequently it is difficult to give a true assessment of his career.

He was born at Middleton, Cork, in the August of 1892, and after his general education locally, he became a member of the Carmelite Order and was ordained to the priesthood in 1916.

Some years later he came to Scotland and devoted his life in the priesthood to the Archdiocese of Glasgow and the Diocese of Motherwell. He spent many years at St. Mary's, Abercromby Street, Glasgow, and will be long remembered for his work in connection with the Legion of Mary. For some time he served in Shotts and then was appointed as parish priest of St. Joseph's, Clarkston. From there he was transferred to Biggar where he remained for one year prior to coming to Bothwell. For six years he remained at Bothwell and was then transferred to St. Charles', Newton, where he remained until the time of his death eighteen years later.

It could be truly said of Fr. Egan that he was a man whose life was hid with Christ in God. He was austere with himself and personal comfort did not come into his calculations. His priestly duties were carried out with meticulous care and he will be remembered in a particular way for his attention to the sick in his parish. Night and day he could be seen tramping the roads to bring comfort and the Sacraments to his people. The distance from the presbytery to the church in Newton is quite considerable, and Fr. Egan was such a well-known figure on the road that there was not a motorist or lorry driver who would not stop to help him on his way.

He enjoyed robust health, but during the course of last year gangrene developed in his foot. He was removed to hospital, but in spite of the care and attention which he received, and for which he was most grateful, it was found necessary to amputate. He seemed to recover and he began to accommodate himself to the use of an artificial limb. After some time he went to Ireland, fully determined to return to Newton on 29th June, but God decreed otherwise; he was destined never to see Newton again. He died in his native Middleton.

Bishop Thomson, accompanied by Canon Thomas O'Neill, attended the Requiem and funeral in Ireland and paid tribute to this worthy priest. At Newton, Monsignor Conroy, the Vicar General of the diocese, with other priests and in the presence of many Newton parishioners and friends, offered Mass for the repose of his soul. May he rest in peace.

Rev. Herbert Gerard Rogers — 25th August, 1973

Fr. Herbert Gerard Rogers, who died in St. John's Hospital, Santa Monica, California, on 25th August, 1973, was one of the best-loved priests of his generation. In 1949, ill-health impelled his departure from Scotland to the more clement climate of California, but such was his influence on his friends that merely to think of him was to feel his presence and be guided toward good decisions. He was a man of many talents: all were given to the priesthood.

Poet, playwright, painter and novelist, Herbert Roger's inspiration as such derived from his pastorate in the West of Scotland, his study—contemplation would be the better word—of the arts and from a characteristic, kindly and idiosyncratic assessment of the human situation. He was an artist and, as a priest, an exemplar. His skills were tools of the mission. A distinguished Scotsman, a journalist of the first class in his field, whom Fr. Herbert counselled in the basics of the Faith, one of "his" converts, said of him that "he was the essential priest." The phrase may serve as his epitaph.

Herbert Gerard Rogers was born in the East End parish of St. Anne, Crownpoint, Glasgow, on 30th April, 1903, the eldest child of Patrick Montague Rogers and Helena, his wife. Educated at St. Anne's primary school, St. Mungo's Academy, Townhead, and St. Mary's College, Blairs, Herbert entered the Scots College, Rome, in 1923, and in 1930 was ordained priest by Archbishop Joseph Palica, at the Lateran Seminary.

A priest of the Archdiocese of Glasgow, he worked during the eighteen years that followed his ordination in a cross-section of what then was one of the Church's biggest dioceses, the people a blend of Scots, cross-fertilised by the influx of poor Irish Catholics during the nineteenth century. Glasgow Catholics were a unique breed. Witty and warm-hearted, pugnaciously intelligent, politically self-opionated, they were fierce in their love of the Catholic Church. They delighted Fr. Herbert and he loved their ways.

From 1930 until 1938, Fr. Herbert worked as a curate in the parish of St. Agnes, Lambhill, where he found material and gained an understanding of Glasgow's grass-roots Catholics that later were distilled into and reflected in his works as playwright.

From Lambhill, in 1938, he went to the seaport parish of St. Mary's, Greenock, where until 1940 he was a curate. From 1940 until 1942 he was a curate at St. Mary's, Saltcoats.

In 1942 he was appointed chaplain to St. Mungo's School, Barskimming House, Mauchline, and in 1946 chaplain to the Convent of Mercy, Baillieston, where he remained until his departure to California.

In 1947, Baillieston became part of the newly constituted Diocese of Motherwell, and Fr. Herbert a priest of that diocese.

The period of his pastorate in the West of Scotland was a time of cultural fermentation. Scotland became aware of its identity. No country in the United Kingdom was more heartlessly exploited during the Industrial Revolution. The Clyde Valley was a prairie of slums studded with small bourgeois encampments. Mass unemployment struck Glasgow like plague. But within the people's impoverishment, tokens of a cultural coming to life appeared. Edwin Muir, Hugh MacDiarmid, Neil Gunn, Eric Linklater, to name a few, reminded Scots that Scotland's writers are considerable artists: they were poets and novelists of the first rank. George Blake and A. J. Cronin were respectable popular novelists. A Glasgow physician, Dr. O. H. Mavor, writing under the pseudonym "James Bridie," conquered London's West End with thoughtful, witty, charmingly tatterdemalion plays, and Paul Vincent Carroll, a Dundalk-born dramatist, settled in Scotland. After receiving the New York Drama Critics' Award for his Shadow and Substance, Carroll found inspiration in his adopted city.

Glasgow, ever a good theatre-going city, until then dependent upon London touring companies, sent plays to the metropolis.

Young Scots grew into an awareness of national character and were decently proud; it was a stimulating time.

As priest and artist, Fr. Herbert played a part in the fermentation. It has been said that before his time he was an ecumenist. He might have thought the word pretentious. The trend we label "ecumenism" always was part of the priestly mission. Fr. Herbert took it for granted. To him, his "separated brethren," first were brethren, persons who engaged his mission. He chatted to them across the gap. He had a talent for friendship.

Out of the fermentation a review, The New Alliance, emerged. Scotland's nationalist movements have been free of the paranoia that marks similar movements in other countries. Scottish Nationalism was and is a responsible, democratic, intelligent force, representing a people who have made a mark on history simply by using their minds. The New Alliance engaged some of Scotland's best minds.

Implicit in the title is the concept of Christendom. It was unself-consciously, unmistakably, Scottish in character, and European. Those who made it were men and women of the Christian tradition, J. M. Reid, Edwin Muir, Morley Jamieson, Douglas Young, Robin Johnson Stewart, George and Ann Scott Moncrieff: there were others, among them, Herbert Rogers.

Reid, a Scottish historian, was an editor who, during a period of extreme political stress and consequent moral duplicity, maintained his integrity as a European. When, in 1944, Poland, bravest of allies, was betrayed, Reid, then editor of a Scottish daily, kept his newspaper faithful to the first and first betrayed war aim. Europe was defeated in the streets of Warsaw, and Reid said so.

The poet Muir's autobiography is a Scottish masterpiece; he was a Scot and, the translator of Kafka, a European who is venerated beyond the post-war division of Europe. Professor Douglas Young's scholarship embraced the whole European tradition and was rooted in the language of his own country.

The Scott Moncrieffs, Morley Jamieson and Robin Johnson Stewart became Catholics and were influenced by Fr. Herbert. He instructed the Scott Moncrieffs.

Ann, by all accounts, was one of those women of gentle goodness who bring grace to all they meet. When, in 1943, she tragically died, she was not quite thirty, and an issue of The New Alliance was dedicated to her by her friends. Fr. Herbert wrote:

ANN — LAST DAYS

*Daylight made a darkness where
She looked beyond the day;
Not the roads she walked were
Her familiar way;
Nor the things she said there
What she had to say;
Death in life must be ere Life in death may.*

Edwin Muir's tribute, Ann Scott Moncrieff (1914-1943), is included in his volume of Collected Poems. It expresses the grace in movement of its subject and Muir's joy when meeting her by chance on Princes Street. but, it is said, he was better pleased by Fr. Herbert's lines than by his own.

Fr. Herbert's plays, written under the pseudonym Gerard Hyde, were produced by the Marian Players.

The company, suggested by the Jesuit Fathers of St. Aloysius' parish, Garnethill, Glasgow, was founded in 1932. Leo Esdaile was first president, and among other founding members were T. P. Maley, who was associated with the Abbey Theatre, Dublin; Hugh McGettigan, J. Gilbert Darlison, Neil Muldoon and James P. Kennedy. During the first decade of its life the company was enriched by the talents of James Crampsey, Paul Curran and Hugh Duffy.

Crampsey went on to join the Don Bosco Players and to consolidate his career as Drama Director of the Scottish B.B.C. After war service, Mr. Curran graduated to the Glasgow Citizens' Theatre, the Royal Court Theatre, London, and presently he is a member, under Lord Olivier, of the National Theatre Company, at the Old Vic.

The Marian Players' first production was Mary Rose, a play amateurs should avoid. But, by fortunate chance, a young inexperienced player, Miss Mamie Sherry, was at the founding meeting. A natural actress, delicately stylish, she had the discretion and authority to shape Barrie's whimsy into something veracious. Throughout her career with the Marians, Miss Sherry, later Mrs. James P. Kennedy, made her work a protracted apprenticeship in theatre. She had qualities of mind and taste that set her above the average amateur.

Mary Rose was a success and the Marian Players became an integral part of Glasgow's cultural scene.

The key figure in the history of the company, all are agreed, was James P. Kennedy. Kennedy was elected president of the Marians in succession to Leo Esdaile. And Kennedy, Paul Curran says, "was the Marians. Jim was the visionary with drive who never tired of working for the company. He wanted to make a theatre." He had a craftsman's approach. A calm man, if there was a quality of excess in his character it was personal modesty. A good actor—his performances, professional and amateur, as the Scottish Jesuit in The First Legion come to mind—he was at his tireless best behind the scenes. Kennedy was aware that a theatre needs more and other than actors. He had the Abbey Theatre in mind; the Abbey produced its own writers.

Among the established plays the Marians presented were The Barretts of Wimpole Street, with Miss Sherry and Mr. Hugh McGettigan as Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning; Priestley's The Good Companions, and works by Gheon, Shaw and Chesterton. The repertoire was varied.

Among the writers they fostered were John McKenna, an actor whose work included the phenomenally successful Mary Ellen, Stephen Hart and Gerard Hyde.

"Hart" was the late William S. Moore, a Glasgow schoolmaster. His Passion Play, Mater Dolorosa, when presented at the Metropole Theatre, stopped the traffic between the theatre's foyer and St. Enoch's Square to which the queues extended. After curtain-call, a young priest, Fr. Herbert Rogers, went back-stage and in conversation it emerged that he had a play in his typewriter. Kennedy extricated it and The Strong Wind was presented to audiences that passed the 10,000 mark.

Fr. Herbert's plays touched the exposed nerves of the Glasgow theatre-going public. Their humour was harsh: they flirted with the sentimental which by dramatist's sleight he turned to the tender. They satirised the smug and were in parts melodramatic. These qualities veraciously made them products of Glasgow, a harsh and melodramatic city, in those days, of slums, agitators, razor-slashers and religious divisions.

"Mixed marriage" was the theme of The Strong Wind. Mr. Jack House wrote that he had "seldom seen a first play of more promise." When Lo! The Mountains, Fr. Herbert's second play opened, the distinguished drama critic confessed he went to the theatre "with feelings of trepidation. One hates to prognosticate promise and see it unfulfilled. I need not have worried. Lo! The Mountains is a much better play . . . It reminded me irresistibly of Sean O'Casey . . ."

A play about a Glasgow parish, it was infused with the writer's love and understanding of the poor. A work of controlled anger, discreetly funny, quietly heart-rending, its ending was tragic, the tragedy infused with an irony characteristic of its author who never more unmistakably was a Glasgow priest.

The destruction of human lives by all that goes to the creation of slums is the theme. A girl is dying in a dilapidated tenement while her father agitates for its destruction. Her brother finds a "Fairy Glen": the family moves there. The glen, too, is destroyed, made a "housing scheme." The girl dies. The family returns to the reconditioned slum.

Mr. House wrote that Lo! The Mountains was "a cry from the heart." Produced by Mrs. Kennedy (Miss Mamie Sherry), powerfully played by Paul Curran, Louie Flynn, James Beirne, John Grant, Nan McAleese, it was, in a sense, an elegy for many to whom Fr. Herbert had administered the sacraments.

After 1939, during the war years, the Marian Players temporarily dispersed. Fr. Herbert's health declined. The features editor of The Glasgow Observer and Scottish Catholic Herald encouraged him, for the newspaper's good, to write essays on spiritual matters. He was a reluctant contributor. A wordsmith, the abstractions theologians appear to cherish, seemed to make him apprehensive. But he wrote Christmas and Easter pieces his editor still values.

During the period he wrote a novel for children which, after the war, was published by Geoffrey Bles. Now out of print, Far and Away the Best, is a little masterpiece. Like all instinctive artists, Fr. Herbert had a talent for communicating with the young that, in a priest, is beyond price. Far and Away the Best is a work of simply elaborated fantasy that may be re-discovered to the profit of a publisher and the delight of young and old readers.

In the Archdiocese of Los Angeles, Fr. Herbert worked as chaplain to various Catholic hospitals. He cultivated his talent for painting and drawing. His oils were compositions in powerful high-light, his drawings almost Chinese in their delicacy. His work as a graphic artist hangs in the homes of his friends. He made friends wherever he halted.

In 1970, Paul Curran visited Los Angeles with the National Theatre Company. "Fr. Herbie was physically frail but his laughter still was strong." Curran was his guest and the priest confided to him that he could not visit the theatre. His ailment made breathing difficult. Surrounded by an audience, he might have a seizure. Curran, saddened, confided in Olivier. The great actor is a severe taskmaster. No one, no matter how eminent, is permitted to enter the theatre while his company prepares a play. He also is a kind man. He sent Fr. Herbert an invitation to the dress rehearsal of Chekhov's The Three Sisters, and Fr. Herbert accepted. An audience of one, alone in the vast Ahmanson theatre, he watched and applauded the world's greatest company of players. So Curran remembers him.

His brother, the Right Reverend Gerard M. Rogers, of the Sacred Rota, with Fr. Kearney, hospital chaplain, concelebrated Fr. Herbert's requiem on 29th August at St. John's hospital chapel. Bishop Johnstone, Auxiliary to the Archbishop of Los Angeles, was present. In Motherwell there was Pontifical Requiem Mass, and His Eminence, Cardinal Heenan said Mass at Westminster for his friend. May he rest in peace.

Right Reverend Monsignor Daniel Canon McGlinchey

28th August, 1973

A native of Rutherglen, Daniel McGlinchey was born on 3rd March, 1903. He had that priceless gift which so many of us treasure and thank God for—being born and reared in a truly Catholic home, where he first learned the glories of the faith.

Glossing over his early education in St. Aloysius' College and Blairs, the good priest, most of us learned to know and love, formally gained his education in the Propaganda College in Rome, where the first Scottish students were to be found in the dark days of our history, when the old faith was proscribed and our Catholics were few and sometimes secret, in the remote glens and islands.

In Propaganda College, the young student eagerly absorbed and was permeated by the spirit of the Church seen in the centre of the Eternal City. No other college had students from so far-flung an empire. There could be found citizens from every continent in the world. There he truly learned the universality of the Church—a lesson he never forgot. There also, in addition to his formal classes in the university, he learned of life in many places and many guises from his fellow students. There I feel he gained that sense of true justice which we will refer to later.

He returned to his native Scotland to complete his studies in the archdiocesan seminary at St. Peter's, Bearsden, being ordained in St. Andrew's Cathedral on 24th April, 1927.

Then followed his first appointment as curate in St. Mary's, Greenock, the church from which, fittingly, he was eventually buried.

After that came seven years in St. Patrick's, Dumbarton, under the legendary Monsignor Kelly, of whom he always spoke with deep admiration and affection.

Twelve years in St. Charles', Paisley, followed. These were the inter-war years, when the clergy were no strangers to the hardships and heart-break and poverty around them. Poky houses, ill-lit closes, Means Test, diseases caused by poverty, neglect, apathy, and pure loss of the will to live. This was the time the eager student of Propaganda founded his Social Study Groups, and campaigned with all his might to remedy the injustices that abounded. In this he was tireless. In addition, in Paisley particularly, there were two large hospitals, where many a day—and night—meant an urgent call to the seriously ill, asking the grace of the Sacraments and the comfort of the priest's presence.

From Paisley, he served as parish priest in Neilston, and after four years was transferred to St. Ninian's, Gourrock, where he remained for the next eighteen years.

While he deeply appreciated and valued the honours his diocese conferred upon him—Chancellor, Treasurer, Canon, Monsignor—he wore them with personal dignity and humility.

St. Ninian's was an old parish, founded in 1880. It became obvious as the years went by, that much work had to be done to the church. With careful planning and untiring energy, Monsignor McGlinchey set about the task. The present magnificent church with its marble sanctuary and altar rails and dignified Stations of the Cross, the stately tabernacle, all bear witness to the success of the project. A new hall beneath the church provides a focal point for parish gatherings and the sale of Catholic periodicals and objects of piety. Indeed it could be said that the old church is only a shell for a complete new interior.

The people, too, took their part: when Mass is said, a beautiful chalice is used, made with gold donated from wedding rings, trinkets, lockets, keepsakes, lovingly and generously donated in answer to his appeal.

But, apart from the material monuments, there was his constant care for the well-being of his people. To give a fleeting example, the young will never forget his memorable celebration of their first communion festivities, nor the old his charity in the winter of their lives.

Above all, his happiness was in the company of his fellow-priests. There was an ever-open door for the youngest curate as much as for the greatest dignitary. He delighted in priestly company: it was his true family.

Finally, conscious of advancing years and failing health, he felt it his duty to retire and give way to someone who would be younger and perhaps be more able to shoulder the burden of pastoral care.

He retired in 1970 to nearby Greenock. There one of his hobbies was watching the ships come and leave the Tail o' the Bank. He became an expert on the various shipping lines and house flags, and could talk learnedly of where they plied their trade on the oceans of the world. Perhaps it reminded him of his student days in Propaganda, where students came and went world-wide too, spreading the faith, the faith he loved so much.

He made his last journey to his Maker at the end of August, 1973.

"The high soul seeks the high road,
The low soul gropes for the low;
And in between are the misty flats
Where souls drift to and fro."

There were never any misty flats for him. He always aimed for the best according to God's will. We can truly say, "Wherever he went was richer for his coming and poorer for his going." May he rest in peace.

Rev. Donald Robertson — 15th September, 1973

Fr. Donald Robertson was born on the 23rd June, 1903, in Springburn. He was educated for the priesthood in St. Aloysius' College, Garnethill, and St. Peter's College, Bearsden. He was ordained priest in June, 1929, and appointed to St. Peter's parish, Partick, as curate. In 1950, he was appointed parish priest of St. Simon's, Partick, the old St. Peter's, and therefore served the whole of his priestly life in the same parish.

As a young priest in Partick, he became distinguished for his attention to the sick of the parish. Indeed, his apostolic devotion in this regard was recognised to be remarkable, even in his younger days, but, in the latter part of his life, and now, after his death, his un-failing care of the sick has in truth become legend.

A good shepherd knows his flock. Fr. Donald's knowledge of the people of Partick was a thing of wonder. He knew everyone and everything about them. He could discourse on people's parents and grandparents, and could discover and unravel with delight the most intricate cross-relationships of blood and marriage. For this simple office of remembrance he is deeply respected and loved by the people of Partick.

Fr. Robertson had gathered together in his character some of the best of Scottish characteristics. He was shrewd in his judgement of character, well read, and possessed of a pawky sense of humour. He was gifted with a dour and unyielding courage which was witnessed to by the uncomplaining steadfastness with which he bore the afflictions and illnesses which dogged the latter part of his life and prevented the full deployment of his many natural talents. A sensitive and affectionate nature hid itself, almost fearfully, behind a set, and sometimes solitary, disposition; but, he was in fact extremely appreciative of any true affection shown him. He bore no malice and was prompt to forgive. On account of the sensitivity of his character, he affected a solemn pessimism, but was noted for the wisdom of his counsel. He would not deceive nor lend himself to deceit.

His name is inscribed in a list of famous pastors who have laboured with distinction in St. Simon's, one of the most historic and venerable parishes in the West of Scotland. His own life in its ministry here, covers nearly a third of the life of the parish founded by Bishop Murdoch.

Some men's lives and their events shoot like brilliant meteors across the sky to expend themselves in an ephemeral burst of glory; the life of others is the arduous task of keeping the ploughshare straight in line; their glory must wait until the harvest-time. From the solid work of Fr. Donald's priestly life there must surely rise a bounteous harvest. He suffered much in the latter years of his life, his gifts and their potential eclipsed by darkness and pain, but his night is over and it is the conviction and sincere prayer of those who knew him well that he lies at peace, awaiting a truly blessed resurrection. May he rest in peace.

His Eminence Cardinal William Theodore Heard, Cardinal Priest of the title of St. Theodore in Palatio — 16th September, 1973

Cardinal William Theodore Heard was born in Scotland on 24th February, 1884, in the Lodge of Fettes College, Edinburgh, where his father, the Rev. William Augustus Heard, M.A., LL.D., was headmaster. The cardinal's mother was Elizabeth Tamar Burt, daughter of Henry Burt of Southport, Lancashire. His paternal grandfather, James Heard, was a merchant in Manchester, but hailed from Forres, Morayshire, and the fact that he matriculated arms at the Lyon Court, Edinburgh, underlines his Scottish origin and indicates that the family enjoyed a considerable degree of affluence and social standing. After attending Manchester Grammar School, the cardinal's father proceeded to Oxford, where he graduated M.A. at Trinity College. He took Holy Orders and for a time was assistant master of Westminster, prior to coming north to take charge of Fettes College, an establishment modelled on the lines of the great English public schools. To this day he looks down from his portrait in the college gallery with a severity of expression that denotes the perfect disciplinarian. He was thirty-six years of age when his son was born. The death of his wife only four years later left the upbringing of the child and another younger son entirely in his hands. The cardinal had no recollection whatever of his mother, and, although he was extremely reticent about his family, it was clear from occasional remarks that his childhood had not been happy. The absence of a mother's affection, coupled with his father's strictness, left a marked effect upon him.

The young William Theodore received all his schooling at Fettes; then, in 1903, following in his father's footsteps, he went south to Oxford and entered Balliol College. Undergraduate life must have been a completely new experience for him, less repressed, and was probably quite a gay time. In old age, when insomnia became a problem and the nights seemed interminable, the cardinal once remarked, "In my young days I didn't mind a bit. Would go dancing several times a week and dance all night. Thought nothing of it." He was a member of the Oxford Union and a rowing Blue in the Boat Race of 1907. This was an annual event that he followed with lively interest and a professionally critical eye. He was the longest lived member of that 1907 crew. In that same year he graduated B.A. from the university. For the next few years he was articled to a legal firm in London and in 1910 was admitted as a solicitor.

The year 1910, however, was to remain the most significant in the life of William Theodore Heard for quite a different reason. Much of his time was engaged in the legalities of tying public houses to the breweries and in the course of his work he gained valuable insight into poverty and deprivation. The state of neglect of the youngsters in the East End appalled him. In an attempt to do something for them, he bought a football and began spending his free evenings with them. This soon came to the notice of a group of Benedictines, who had bought a disused tea factory and transformed it into a club. To spare Mr. Heard the inconvenience of travelling back and forth from central London, they suggested that he move in with them and in this way he came into direct contact with Catholic clergy. On 9th August, 1910, after instruction in the Catholic Faith, he was baptised conditionally by Father Stanislaus St. John, S.J., in the church of the Immaculate Conception, Farm Street, and was reconciled with the Catholic Church, admitted to Holy Communion and confirmed. This decision appears to have been accepted by his father with equanimity, though in some measure it must have estranged him from his family. One wonders, however, if the motto he later chose—recte et sapienter—does not reflect his innermost feelings about conversion to the true Faith, which in his case was so complete and unconditional that most people were surprised to learn that he had not been a Catholic since birth. The young solicitor, however, was only gradually discovering his real vocation and eventually he requested to be taken on by the Right Reverend Peter Amigo, bishop of Southwark, as a candidate for the Catholic priesthood.

On 26th October, 1913, William Theodore Heard entered the Venerable English College, Rome, to prepare himself for the sacred ministry, and thereby began an association with the college which was to endure for sixty years. He was much older than the other students and his Scottish, religious, Oxonian, and legal background put him in a category quite different from his fellows, as regards both maturity and variety of experience. For all that, he appears to have settled down admirably, though his characteristic reserve was also in evidence. One contemporary used to quip that "Heard's breakfast always consisted of black coffee and a frown." In 1915 he received first tonsure and all four minor orders, completing in that same year the doctorate course in philosophy at the Gregorian University. The subdiaconate was conferred on him in June, 1917, and less than a year later, on 30th March, 1918, at the age of thirty-four years, William Theodore Heard was ordained to the priesthood in the Lateran Basilica by Cardinal Pompili, the cardinal-vicar of Rome. After ordination he continued with his studies and obtained doctorates in theology and canon law. It deserves to be recorded, that throughout these years in college the cardinal's father paid the seminary fees of his impoverished solicitor son.

His studies finally completed, Father Heard returned to England in 1921 and was appointed curate at the parish of the Most Holy Trinity, Dockhead, Bermondsey, where his great friend Canon Edward Murnane was parish priest, and there he remained until the autumn of 1927, acting as administrator of the parish after the canon's death. Those six years of active pastoral work may well have been the happiest period of his life, and he threw himself with a will into the daily routine of this busy parish. As a priest he must have experienced at first hand the hardship, misery and poverty of the under-privileged classes in the East End of London. It was for them that he had left his lucrative legal practice in the West End to dedicate his life to the spiritual welfare of ordinary men and women.

The decade following the Great War was one of widespread unemployment and social unrest, and it was in that hard school that the cardinal learned to understand human nature under stress and handle it with consummate charity. For all his academic background and natural aloofness, it is clear that he reached the hearts of his parishioners and many of them revered the memory of "Father Heard" right into old age. For his part, Cardinal Heard retained an affection for Bermondsey, and in later years returned regularly to visit old friends. The young people of the district were among his special concerns as a curate, and it gave him great happiness when a youth group from the parish called on him at the English College some forty years later, in the course of a brief visit to Rome. The work that he did on behalf of abandoned youngsters through the Fisher Club is still continued by the Downside Settlement.

In April 1926, Monsignor John Prior, a former vice-rector of the Beda College, Rome, and subsequently judge and dean of the Sacred Roman Rota, died at Darlington after a prolonged illness. The Holy See looked around for some distinguished jurist from the British Empire to replace him and the natural choice was Father William Theodore Heard. In this way he returned to the Eternal City, called to the direct service of the Holy See, being named a domestic prelate on 30th September, 1927, and uditore di Rota the following day. There he remained from then until his death, a period of forty-six years, interrupted only occasionally for a summer vacation back home in the United Kingdom.

Monsignor Arthur Hinsley, rector of the Venerabile, later cardinal archbishop of Westminster, welcomed him back to the college, where the students received him with a rousing vivat. Monsignor Heard remained there only briefly, until such time as was needed to set up his own apartment in the city. It was at this time, however, that he began his greatest pastoral service to his alma mater—confessor and director of the English College students. It established a lasting personal bond between himself and generations of the clergy of England and Wales and quite probably earned him more gratitude, affection and esteem than any other pastoral work he ever undertook. Many bishops and countless priests could testify to his kindness and understanding as confessor, his patience with his penitents, clarity and wisdom of judgment, his practical sound advice. Fortunately, the feelings of one student about him do survive in writing: "Heard notices everything and is very sharp indeed. It's surprising what he knows about people, their doings, their character. He's not afraid to tell you what he thinks of you, either good or bad,—that's in confession, of course . . . You might think Heard is a terribly fierce old buffer, but in fact he's extremely gentle and the soul of kindness, though he doesn't like to show it." Apart from the years of the Second World War, when the college was forced to close and the students returned to England, Monsignor Heard continued to exercise this priestly function, even after his elevation to the cardinalate, indeed almost until the time of his death. During the summer months he acted as extraordinary confessor to the Scots College students, at their villa near Marino for the villeggiatura, and he was also one of the official deputies of the college to vigilate over matters of discipline.

Monsignor Heard is remembered from those days as being a man of fine appearance, a tall, erect, athletic figure, his hair en brosse, handsome featured, but, like his father, with a stern, somewhat forbidding expression. Many mistook his reserved manner for coldness, or indifference, but in fact it was perfectly in keeping with the accepted concept of the English judge, whose integrity must be something almost tangible, to be defended even at the cost of appearing distant, inaccessible, or lacking in those finer social graces, which would make his company more congenial and much sought after. Appearances are deceptive and those who were closest to the cardinal all speak of his geniality and warmth underneath the brusque front, and especially of his appreciation of even the smallest act of consideration, or kindness shown him. Moreover, he was endowed with a very trenchant form of humour and few ever left him without smiling over some "Heard expression," or story. One student had the presence of mind to collect some of these and write them down, while Monsignor Heard was still dean of the Rota, and his reason for doing so is very touching: "So because I think these sayings are worth keeping and because I am very fond of old Heard, and grateful to him for all he has done for me in confession and in making life more enjoyable, I have written this and am putting it in the archives, so that Venerabilini later on can get an inside glimpse of that great old character William Theodore Heard." Little did the compiler think that within the year "that great old character" would be a prince of the Church!

As judge of the Rota, William Theodore Heard may yet go down in history as one of the greatest jurists of the Catholic Church, to borrow the phrase Pope John himself used, when conferring the Red Hat on him for service to the Holy See. Monsignor Heard dedicated thirty-two years of his life to the tedious work of examining legal evidence, mostly in matrimonial cases, a task which calls for a meticulous examination of the depressing, often tragic, facts of wrecked marriages. Tireless, never lazy, he devoted hours of study to his case-work, with resulting decisions that those most competent to judge have declared extraordinary, not only for his crystal-clear exposition of the cases and terse Latin style, for which he became noted, but even more on account of the fine legal balance he struck, combining a vast and profound knowledge of the law with perfect equity in applying it. Bishop John Brewer has written, so truly, that for Monsignor Heard it was not a question of justice being tempered by mercy; for him justice was synonymous with mercy.

Pope Pius XII died in October 1958, and was succeeded by Pope John XXIII. In the first consistory to be held for almost six years, the dean of the Rota was created a cardinal. On account of ill health, the next senior judge was unable to assume the duties of dean, and so Monsignor Heard succeeded to the office. According to the regulations of the Roman Curia, a Rota judge is expected to retire upon attaining his seventy-fifth birthday, which in the case of Monsignor Heard occurred on 24th February, 1959. Shortly after becoming dean, he had to undergo a serious surgical operation, which left him in a very weak condition. His convalescence took a slow course and his resignation, already overdue, now appeared imminent. Too ill to conduct any official business personally, he had given strict orders that all Rota matters should be taken directly to the Palazzo della Cancelleria, where the tribunal has its offices. One November morning, however, a monsignor called at the English College from the Vatican. In spite of the doorman's repeated refusals, he insisted on speaking with Monsignor Heard personally, and flatly refused to go away. Informed of this (and making no attempt to conceal his annoyance), the dean snapped that the persistent fellow could be shown up and that he would soon make sure that he went away! This was the special messenger from Pope John to inform Monsignor Heard that it was the intention of the Holy Father to confer the cardinalate on him at the next consistory. Upon receiving this totally unexpected news, the old man broke down and wept. Appropriately, it was 16th November, the feast of St. Margaret of Scotland.

The immediate reaction to the announcement was of enthusiastic approval, especially at the English College and in Bermondsey. Scottish Catholics felt that they had a special claim to the new cardinal and were second to none in manifesting the joy they felt at the high honour paid to their fellow countryman. William Theodore Heard was the first native-born Scot to be elevated to the cardinalate since 1538, when that great patriot, David Beaton, was created cardinal by Pope Paul III. A span of 421 fateful years separated the two events.

Archbishop Gray of St. Andrews and Edinburgh and Archbishop Scanlan, at that time bishop of Motherwell, represented the Scottish Hierarchy at the consistory. The secret consistory was held in the Vatican on Monday, 14th December, 1959, at which the Pope, in the presence of the cardinals only, informed them officially of his intention to augment the Sacred College by naming new members. Special messengers brought word of this to the eight prelates concerned, Monsignor Heard receiving the Biglietto at the Palazzo della Cancelleria. On the Wednesday evening, in the course of the semi-public consistory, the new cardinals received their scarlet birettas and sapphire rings from the Pope. The following morning, 17th December, Pope John conferred the Red Hat upon them during the splendid ceremonial of the public consistory, held in St. Peter's basilica. Cardinal Heard was so weak and frail that he had to be dispensed from kneeling during the ceremonies. In a second secret consistory held that morning, he was given as his title the deanery church of St. Theodore on the Palatine, one of Rome's most ancient churches, and assigned a place in the order of cardinal deacons. He was also named member of the Congregation of the Sacraments, the tribunal of the Apostolic Segnatura, and of the Pontifical Commission for the Codification of Oriental Canon Law. In the evening the Red Hat was brought to the English College in the traditional manner. Everything about the consistory had been magnificent, but it left the cardinal very exhausted and for the first few months he remained confined to the college, where it had been decided that he should continue to reside.

Cardinal Heard paid his first visit as cardinal to the Scots College on 6th February, 1960. Replying to Monsignor Clapperton's warm words of welcome, he spoke movingly of his sense of gratitude to the Pope for having created him cardinal in recognition of his many years of service. He had not looked for this and frankly believed that further honours had passed him by, but it gave him great happiness to think that Scotland was represented once again in the Sacred College, even if only by his own person. That same day, it was announced that Monsignor Gerard Rogers, vicar-general of Motherwell diocese, was to succeed the cardinal as judge of the Roman Rota.

Cardinal Heard did not take formal possession of his diaconia of St. Theodore until 19th June, again, on account of his precarious health. The rectors of the two national colleges, Monsignor Tickle and Monsignor Flanagan, were present at the ceremony and the students too were there in strength. During the summer, the cardinal returned home and was feted at Bermondsey and at Craiglockhart, in the diocese of his birth. In the previous February he had been invested with the Grand Cross of the Knights of Malta and further honours were to follow. He was elected an honorary fellow of Balliol and he received an honorary LL.D. from the university of Edinburgh, sixty years almost to the day after his father had stood in the same place to receive the same honour.

The two events that meant most to His Eminence were his appointment as cardinal protector of the English College and his consecration as archbishop. With the death of Cardinal Nicola Canali, the protectorate of the Venerabile fell vacant and Pope John readily assented to the request that Cardinal Heard be named to the office. Few have ever given such proof of having the interests of the college so much at heart and in William Theodore Heard the students found a cardinal protector worthy in every sense of that name. The papal brief of nomination, dated 20th December, 1961, was read formally to the community on 27th January the following year, and on that same occasion the cardinal consecrated the new high altar of the college chapel.

Cardinal Heard's appointment as archbishop came about in this way. Prior to the opening of the Ecumenical Council, Pope John XXIII decided to confer the episcopate on the twelve cardinal deacons of the Sacred College, so that their participation in the sessions of the council could not be disputed. Consequently, on 5th April, 1962, Cardinal Heard was provided to the titular see of Feradi Maggiore and on Holy Thursday, 19th April, he received episcopal consecration in the Lateran Basilica from the hands of the Sovereign Pontiff himself. Although now in his seventy-ninth year and well beyond an age when one might have expected him to exercise the fullness of his priesthood, the fact of becoming an archbishop was a source of great consolation to Cardinal Heard, because he could now do something, that as a cardinal deacon had been beyond his powers—ordain the students of the English College to the priesthood. Until 1968, when his eyesight had almost completely failed, the cardinal performed the annual ordinations in the college. Altogether, he ordained forty-three priests, twenty-nine of whom he had previously ordained to the diaconate. He also ordained nine other deacons, who later received the priesthood from their respective diocesan bishops. On 1st December, 1963, His Eminence consecrated the rector of the college, Monsignor Gerard Tickle, titular bishop of Bela, upon his appointment as ordinary of the British Armed Forces.

Soon after being made a cardinal, in June 1960, Cardinal Heard was named a member of the central preparatory commission for the Ecumenical Council, and between 1962 and 1966 he took part in all four sessions of the Council. Far from being a diehard conservative, His Eminence weighed each proposal objectively, without being in any way partisan, and voted placet to a surprising number of radical propositions. He accepted without hesitation the decrees promulgated by the Holy See and his readiness to implement them would have been considered admirable, if found in a man of half his age. Even when the changes affected him directly and involved some personal sacrifice, such as adapting himself to the revised order of Mass, the cardinal obtained permission of the Pope to anticipate the introduction of the new rite. In this same period, Cardinal Heard was appointed to the special three-man cardinalitial commission to study the reform of the Roman Curia, which had been called for by the Fathers of the general Council.

On 19th June, 1963, William Theodore Heard was the only cardinal from the British Isles (Cardinal Godfrey of Westminster and Cardinal D'Alton of Armagh having died earlier in the year) to enter the conclave from which Cardinal Giovanni Battista Montini emerged as Pope Paul VI. In April 1969, Cardinal Heard became the senior cardinal deacon, a position of considerable importance, because in the event of there being a conclave, it would have fallen to him to announce the name of the newly-elected pope, and later to crown him as Sovereign Pontiff at the papal coronation. In reality, however, it entailed attending upon Pope Paul at many ceremonies, and when this proved too arduous for a man of his years and frail condition, the cardinal opted for the title of cardinal priest in the secret consistory of May 1970, with permission to retain the church of St. Theodore, which was raised pro hac vice to the rank of a "titular" church. When, later in the year, the Pope imposed an age-limit on the cardinals, which excluded those over eighty from taking part in a future conclave, Cardinal Heard, unlike some others, accepted this measure gracefully, regarding it as a further proof of the Pope's concern for men of his advanced age. By this time, His Eminence had already resigned spontaneously from whatever positions he had held in the Curia.

In the last years of his life, the cardinal mellowed considerably, and it is all the more regrettable that blindness and deafness closed in on him and forced him into a new, involuntary form of isolation. He kept to his rooms in the college and his appearances in public, even at papal functions, became ever more infrequent. He gladly made an exception for such special occasions as the laying of the foundation stone of the new Scots College, on 9th June, 1963, and the formal opening of the college by His Holiness, Pope Paul VI, on 16th November, 1964. And, of course, for that gala occasion, when the Pope conferred the cardinalate on His Eminence Cardinal Gordon Joseph Gray, during the consistory held on 30th April, 1969. When reading became almost an impossibility and the long days and sleepless nights began to weigh so heavily on him, the old cardinal became quite radiant when a friend called to pass some time in conversation with him. He continued to follow a rigid daily routine and devoted long periods of time to prayer. It is characteristic of him, that when his eyesight had so deteriorated that he had to substitute recitation of the rosary for that of the breviary, in those last weeks before he died, a student read to him daily from a recent book on the mysteries of the rosary, which had been recommended to him, but which he found impossible to read by himself.

For eighteen consecutive summers, Cardinal Heard always spent at least part of his vacation in Scotland. These visits gave him immense pleasure and each year he looked forward eagerly to the time when he could leave the heat of Rome and enjoy the invigorating fresh air of the Scottish countryside. In the autumn, he returned to Rome full of anecdotes and happy memories of the people whom he had met and the places he had visited. This summer was no exception. During July the cardinal counted the days until his departure, like a schoolboy waiting to be released from school. He passed the month of August as a guest of Archbishop Scanlan, but even before it was time for him to return to Italy, Cardinal Heard already showed signs that physically all was not well. The archbishop was deeply concerned about the cardinal's health and only with great misgivings allowed him to undertake the journey. The Mass he offered in Glasgow on the morning of his departure proved to be his last.

On arrival at Rome, Cardinal Heard was in a very confused and agitated condition and it soon became imperative to take him to the clinic of the Blue Sisters at S. Stefano Rotondo. At first there was no improvement in his condition, but towards the end of the week the cardinal became quite lucid again and at one stage appeared to rally. Father John Hughes, S.J., administered the sacrament of the sick. On Sunday morning, 16th September, shortly after 9 a.m., there was an unexpected collapse and within minutes Cardinal William Theodore Heard had peacefully breathed his last.

The following day, the Holy Father came from his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo to pray at the cardinal's body, which by that time had been vested in full pontificals and was laid out in the mortuary chapel of the clinic. This was a final token of the Pope's gratitude to this venerable priest, for having served the Apostolic See so faithfully during four pontificates. Many cardinals and prelates of the Roman Curia, as well as numerous other friends, came to pay their last respects. On Tuesday afternoon the rogito—a brief account of the cardinal's life and work for the Church—was read out, before being sealed in the coffin, which was then brought privately to St. Peter's, where it lay overnight in the left transept of the basilica.

The funeral took place the following morning, 19th September, the feast of St. Theodore of Canterbury. The solemn Requiem Mass was offered by Bishop John Brewer, a former vice-rector of the English College and one of the late cardinal's closest friends, in the presence of almost thirty cardinals, including Cardinal Gordon Joseph Gray, the heads of the various congregations of the Curia, representatives of the British Government and the diplomatic corps accredited to the Holy See, and members of the chapter of St. Peter's. Archbishop Scanlan of Glasgow and Bishop Ellis of Nottingham occupied special places in choir. By a happy coincidence, Professor A. J. McDonald of Dundee University and Professor A. L. Brown of Glasgow University were present in Rome for historical research and they represented Fettes College and Balliol College at the obsequies. The first year philosophy students of the Scots College, who had arrived in Rome only four days previously, were the servers of the Mass. After Cardinal Luigi Traglia, subdean of the Sacred College, had imparted the final absolution, the cardinal's remains were taken to the Campo Verano for interment and there his body was laid to rest in the vault belonging to the English College. May he rest in peace.

The Very Reverend John Canon Page — 4th October, 1973

John Page was born in Dundee on the 25th August, 1913, and was baptised in St. Andrew's Cathedral. He attended the Boys' School of the parish and for a short time studied at Lawside Academy before entering Blairs College, Aberdeen, in 1928. He proceeded to the College of Propaganda, Rome, in October 1932, for the higher ecclesiastical studies; received tonsure, minor orders, and the subdiaconate and diaconate in 1937; and was ordained priest in Rome on the Feast of St. Joseph, 19th March, 1938.

His first appointment was as third assistant to the late Mgr. Canon John McDaniel of St. John's parish, Perth. Those were days when there were many vocations to the priesthood and when it was not uncommon for dioceses of the more northerly parts of Scotland to loan priests to populous dioceses in the south. Father Page was an addition to a parish that was already adequately staffed. That did not foreclose an active and valuable ministry to the young priest. Endowed by nature and upbringing with good common sense, with an excellent preparation for the ministry received in Propaganda, and a youthful and refreshing zeal, Father Page found occupation in abundance in visiting the homes of parishioners, attending hospitals and bringing the sick and house-bound comfort and cheerfulness. He showed interest in all the affairs of the parish and city—a feature that marked the whole of his thirty-five years of pastoral ministry. He was given charge of the Angels' Guild and it was in his weekly talks to these young girls (and in his visits to the classes of St. John's Primary School) that he acquired the facility of speaking simply and in words that would be understood by his audience. This facility remained a remarkable quality of Father Page to the last homily he preached a few hours before he was overwhelmed by a heart attack that took him to God a few days later.

After a ministry of two years in St. John's, Father Page was transferred to the parish of Our Lady of Victories, Dundee, to assist the well-loved Monsignor Provost William McCurrach. "Forebank," as the parish is known locally from the street in which the church stands, was a populous and flourishing parish. A wider field of personal contacts opened before the young priest in the Catholic Young Men's Society of which he was given charge. His interests fanned out in many other directions, particularly in the affairs of the Dundee Association of Catholic Boys' Clubs. He was an invaluable ally of boys and chaplains in the clubs and in the many joint activities of the clubs—discussion groups, day retreats at Lawside Convent, rallies in the parish churches of the city, addressed by preachers of national renown, and in the annual Sports Day of the Associated Clubs. He made time, too, to direct the discussions and activities of a flourishing Young Christian Workers' group.

The next public action in Father Page's ministry illustrates the ever-expanding Catholic sense of this fine priest. It was the period of the 1939-1945 war. Many of the boys and young men of the parish were called to National Service. Father Page volunteered as an Army Chaplain to bring to the young men of the Forces the presence of another priest and father. He served for three years in the best tradition of Catholic padres.

He returned to "Forebank" in 1947 and ministered there for a further two years under the late Canon James Quinn. There followed one year at the cathedral as senior assistant to Bishop James Donald Scanlan, then coadjutor of the diocese.

In September 1949 Father Page received his first charge—St. Serf's, High Valleyfield. "Valleyfield," in the heart of the Fife coalfields, comprised three villages, separate and proudly independent, each with its own pit, its own institute, its own local interests and way of life, but one parish. It was an engaging situation that called for one thing—a priest who was father to all. That was what Father Page showed himself to be, and the miners, with their families, recognised it very quickly. Miners are big-hearted, generous people, individualists to a degree but united in great goodness when disaster strikes, whether in family or group, or community. Father Page was at home here and accepted as one of the community. His ministry was of three years. When he returned on Friday, 28th September, 1973, for the celebration of the diamond jubilee of the establishment of the parish, he was received and welcomed rapturously; and at his funeral a mere ten days later, a large delegation of the parishioners travelled to Dundee to pay their last sad but grateful respects to a much loved pastor.

In 1952, Father Page was appointed to St. Thomas', Arbroath. Here another dimension was added to his service of the Church when he was appointed Catholic Representative on the County of Angus Education Committee, an experience in the administration of public education that stood him in good stead in later years.

In the early years of the nineteen-fifties, the City of Dundee was engaged on a policy of expansion of industrial premises and housing around the periphery of the city. A large development was planned for the Charleston area on the western boundary. Provision for Catholics in school, church and priests' house was urgently required. His Lordship Bishop Hart entrusted the area to Father Page in 1956, and with it the chaplaincy of the Little Sisters of the Poor whose Wellburn Home fell within the proposed boundaries of the new parish. The Sisters most generously offered the chaplain's house to be the presbytery and their chapel to be the parish church until a site had been acquired and a church and presbytery built. From Wellburn, Father Page with his assistant, ministered to the growing parish till St. Clement's Church was solemnly blessed and opened in 1962.

Blessed by nature with a gentle and equable temperament, with a kindly manner and an obvious zeal for the spiritual welfare of his people, Father Page quietly and unobtrusively forged a bond of affection and loyalty with them and fostered a sense of community in the congregation. Through assiduous pastoral visiting, he knew every family of the parish and each member by name; showed himself ready to do good at all times; concerned himself with the formation of the children in church and school, with the instruction of converts and the counselling of young couples preparing for marriage. His parishioners responded generously in spirituals and temporals. It is remarkable that priest and congregation were able to clear a £50,000 cost of church and presbytery within ten years from the ordinary Sunday collections

With an understanding begotten of long and varied ministry, Father Page had an admirable sense of the mission of the Church. He was instrumental in fostering numerous vocations to the Little Sisters of the Poor. He encouraged many young ladies of his parish to qualify themselves, by attending Craiglockhart College of Education, to supply the grave need for Catholic teachers in Dundee. Besides such an active ministry within his parish, he represented the bishop and the Church on the Dundee Education Committee for some eight years. He gave of his time and experience generously to assure Catholic schooling and safeguard the interests of the Catholic children of Dundee. He faced resolutely the difficulties, problems and tensions with which he found himself confronted in the exercise of this mission until a breakdown in health in 1972 counselled his resignation from the Education Committee. In a still wider field, Father Page served the Missions as Diocesan Director of the Pontifical Aid Societies since the death of the late Canon Andrew McKinley in 1964; and as National Vice-President of the Pontifical Society for the Propagation of the Faith since 1971. He served the administration of the diocese in various other ways and was appointed a canon of the Cathedral Chapter in 1971.

Since retiring from the Education Committee, Canon Page enjoyed an improvement in health and continued his heavy ministry right to the end. On Sunday, 30th September, he carried out his normal programme and preached at all the Masses on Devotion to our Blessed Lady and the practice of the Rosary. In the early hours of Monday, 1st October, he suffered a severe heart attack and was admitted to the Dundee Royal Infirmary. He received wonderful care and attention there from doctors and nurses, but was overwhelmed by a massive coronary in the late evening of Thursday, 4th October. His obsequies took place on Monday, 8th October, in St. Clement's, his parish church. His Lordship Bishop Hart was the principal concelebrant and preached the panegyric. Bishop Foylan of Aberdeen, members of the Dunkeld Chapter of Canons, Father Patrick McNally, the canon's assistant, and Father Charles Adamson, until recently his assistant at St. Clement's, concelebrated with the bishop. In the packed church, the congregation of St. Clement's were joined by the priests of the diocese, former curates of the canon and many people from the city and the parishes where Canon Page had served. The Lord Provost of Dundee attended the Requiem Mass and the funeral in Balgay Cemetery along with representatives of the Dundee Town Council and Education Committee. Bishop Foylan officiated at the interment.

"Remember your leaders, who preached the word of God to you, and as you reflect on the outcome of their lives, imitate their faith" (Hebrews 13: 7).

May he rest in peace.

Rev. John Conlan — 9th October, 1973

Rev. John Conlan was born in Stevenston on the 12th October, 1917, of an Irish father and a Scottish mother, which accounted for his great love of Ireland and of his native land. He was proud, too, of his Ayrshire heritage and was very familiar with the famous bard whose words he often quoted and whose songs he often sang. This zealous and energetic priest received his early education at St. John's Primary School in his home town, and from there he graduated to St. Michael's College, Irvine, for his secondary education. From a very early age, he had shown signs that God was calling him to the priesthood, and so it came as no surprise to his family and friends when he left St. Michael's and entered St. Mary's College, Blairs, Aberdeen—the national junior seminary—at the age of fifteen. In college, his capacity for making friends soon made him a very popular young man and this characteristic was evident throughout the thirty years of his priestly life.

In 1936, having completed his studies at Blairs College, his superiors had decided that he should proceed to the Royal Scots College, Valladolid, for his immediate preparations towards reaching his ultimate goal. However, owing to the outbreak of the Spanish Civil War, this was not to be, and so he completed his training at St. Peter's College, Bearsden. He was ordained to the sacred priesthood in St. Andrew's Cathedral on the feast of Saints Peter and Paul, 29th June, 1943, by the late Archbishop Campbell, who at that time was Bishop of Argyll and the Isles and who later was to succeed Archbishop Mackintosh as Archbishop of Glasgow.

Fr. Conlan began his priestly career in Our Lady of Lourdes, Cardonald, albeit his sojourn there was very short—a mere six weeks. Nevertheless, he remembered those six weeks very vividly and was very proud of his association with the late Canon George Galbraith. It was on leaving Cardonald and taking up his appointment at St. Peter's, Partick, that he began making his real impact on the archdiocese. This busy, bustling city parish presented a challenge to the young priest, and this challenge he met with an energy and zeal prompted by his deep sense and awareness of his vocation to help in the salvation of souls. In all his activities, he was sustained by a simple, solid faith based, as he himself used to say, on the "old catechism." It was at this time that Fr. Conlan's wonderful kindness along with understanding and sympathy became evident, and this was seen by all in his ministrings to the sick of the parish and to the sick and dying in the local hospital, the Western Infirmary, where as a visiting chaplain he was most popular with the doctors and the nursing staff. It was at this time, too, that he made so many friends, so much so that it was a constant source of amazement to his colleagues that no matter where he went, he invariably met someone he knew. The friendships he formed in St. Peter's and in the Western Infirmary he cherished and maintained long after leaving Partick.

For fourteen happy years he worked in this thriving parish, and it was with a heavy heart that he left the people of Partick to take up his new appointment at the Immaculate Conception, Maryhill. However, the natural sadness he felt soon disappeared as he threw himself with untiring and ceaseless effort into the parochial life of Maryhill. His kindness to those in need, his sympathy with those in sorrow, his charming smile, his ready and quick wit, soon made him very popular and won for him many new friends. During the twelve years he spent in Maryhill, he assisted in no small measure towards the building and opening of the new church of the Immaculate Conception. It was during this time that he was appointed chaplain to Our Lady's Hostel, Wilton Street—a post he held right up to the time of his death. His sensitive and sympathetic nature made him feel very deeply for the unfortunate girls who found their way to the hostel, and he did everything in his power to help them make a new start in life. Many of them, thanks to Fr. Conlan, after spending some little time in the hostel, left to take their place in society and buried for good their unfortunate past. To the members of the Legion of Mary who supervised and helped in the rehabilitation of the girls, he proved himself a most conscientious chaplain—very seldom in all the years Fr. Conlan looked after the hostel did he miss the weekly "allocutio." It was only in the latter months of his life that his visits became less frequent and then only because "his flesh was weak."

At Maryhill, this good priest again showed his solicitude for the sick by his constant visits to the local hospital at Canniesburn, which was served from the Immaculate Conception. Besides being chaplain, he was also appointed to the Board of Management and proved himself a great help to the other members, drawing from the experience he gained from his fourteen years working in the Western Infirmary. It was at Maryhill, too, that a rather unusual occurrence took place. The parishioners realised that two very important events were to take place in 1968—their beloved pastor, Canon Torley, would be fifty years a priest and Fr. Conlan, his senior assistant, would be due to celebrate his Silver Jubilee, and what better way to celebrate and honour these two outstanding priests and close friends, than to have a joint function at which presentations would be made to both. Although Fr. Conlan was appointed, a few weeks earlier, parish priest of Our Lady of Perpetual Succour, Broomhill, that is what happened. These two ministers of God rejoiced together at reaching these milestones in their priestly lives. Fr. Conlan spent some of the happiest and most rewarding years of his life among the people of Maryhill, but he knew that sooner or later his superiors would ask him to turn his efforts and zeal to another part of the archdiocese, and that call came a few weeks before he celebrated his Silver Jubilee.

He was now parish priest of the comparatively new parish at Broomhill, but the extra responsibility lay heavy on the shoulders of this very conscientious priest. Fr. Conlan had many happy days in Broomhill and the many friends he made there helped him to endure the days that were not so happy. However, it was during his sojourn here that his earlier years of unsparing effort in the service of the Divine Lord, coupled with the anxieties and sometimes frustrations of managing this young and growing parish, had its effect, and his health began to fail. We, his friends, noticed that the sparkle that was so much to the forefront until this time only showed occasionally, and the man whose tread was so sure and firm began to slow up and falter. So after three and a half years of continued work in spite of failing health, Fr. Conlan, at the behest of his superiors, bade farewell to his friends in Broomhill and left for Castlemilk as the parish priest of St. Martin's.

Here in Castlemilk, as he was wont to say, he was among his "ain kind of folk," and spent nearly two very happy and contented years. His health began to deteriorate alarmingly and he was only a few months there when he had to undergo a major operation from which he never really recovered. His illness, if anything, made him more kind and sympathetic. His parishioners were won over by this kind and genial priest whose ingratiating smile and ready wit never deserted him right up to the end, and then only when he lapsed into unconsciousness. His greatest disappointment during his days at Castlemilk was his inability to visit all his parishioners, but the people fully realised his condition, as they saw him often struggling to say Holy Mass or take devotions. They saw in Fr. Conlan a good and holy pastor, a lovable parish priest, and they had nothing but the kindest thoughts and wishes towards him, and he, in his turn, appreciated their goodness and sympathetic understanding. His stay among them was all too short.

Fr. Conlan died on Tuesday, 9th October, at 9.50 in the evening, worn out by his work for God in the various parishes he served in the different parts of the archdiocese during his thirty years in the sacred ministry. The huge congregation present in St. Martin's at the reception of the body, when Mass was celebrated by Bishop Winning with a number of Fr. Conlan's friends as concelebrants, and then again at the Requiem Mass, celebrated by the late Bishop Ward, testified eloquently to the great popularity of this man of God. Little did we think as we listened to Bishop Ward, visibly moved by the sadness of the occasion, paying his respects, as he himself said, to this "good priest of God," that he himself was to be called to his reward so suddenly, shortly afterwards. Besides the parishioners of St. Martin's, the congregation was made up of Fr. Conlan's friends from Partick, Maryhill, Broomhill, his cousins from Kingscourt, Co. Cavan, and of course, his kinsfolk from his beloved Stevenston.

Fr. Conlan, throughout the years, never forgot his friends in Stevenston. He visited his family often, but besides that, he returned on many an occasion to join with his friends in their rejoicings and to comfort and console them in their sorrow. The Stevenston folk were very proud of Fr. John and they had every reason to be so, for in him they had a wonderful ambassador.

There was another little community that mourned the passing of Fr. Conlan, and that was the congregation of St. Mary's, Arisaig. He first became acquainted with this little West Highland village while a student, and since then not a year passed without his paying at least one visit, and so he became a "well kent figure" in this beautiful holiday resort. On the evening of the day he was buried, a Requiem Mass for the repose of his soul was offered in the little village church before a packed congregation.

Fr. John Conlan was laid to rest in St. Peter's Cemetery, Dalbeth, on the 12th day of October, 1973—his 56th birthday. May he rest in peace.

Right Reverend James Ward, Bishop of Sita — 21st October, 1973

Bishop James Ward was born in Dumbarton on 4th September, 1905. He was the second eldest of eight children. His mother provided a home for her own brothers and sisters as well; her parents had died when she was fifteen. His father was choirmaster in St. Patrick's, and with the encouragement and help of Monsignor Kelly the parish priest, he was elected a member of the town council and was for many years the senior magistrate. Monsignor Kelly spared no effort in urging his flock to secure a good education for their children. In those days there were no educational grants, and bursaries were hard to come by. Secondary education for a family involved parents in constant sacrifice and hardship. The Ward family was one of the many families in Dumbarton which followed Monsignor Kelly's advice—four of them became teachers and two qualified engineers, one of the family died in infancy. Bishop Ward completed his early education in St. Patrick's Primary School in McLean Place (one of his fellow pupils there—William Hart—was to become Bishop of Dunkeld), and in 1918 he entered St. Aloysius' College, Glasgow. For five years he made the daily journey between Dumbarton and Glasgow. He secured an excellent leaving certificate of five Highers and one Lower. In September 1923 he was accepted as a student for the priesthood in St. Peter's College, Bearsden, and on completion of the course of studies with distinction he was ordained in St. Andrew's Cathedral on 29th June, 1929.

His first appointment was as curate to St. John's, Barrhead, but in December of that year he was appointed diocesan secretary and curate in St. Charles' parish. He became chancellor in April 1947, vicar general and diocesan treasurer in March 1948. On 21st September, 1960, he was consecrated bishop with the titular see of Sita and auxiliary to Archbishop Campbell. Archbishop Campbell died in July 1963 and Bishop Ward was chosen by the chapter as vicar capitular. When Archbishop Scanlan was appointed, Bishop Ward became once again vicar general and diocesan treasurer. He was appointed parish priest of Holy Cross in March 1965.

His life as a priest and bishop is a mixture of pastoral and administrative work, and the story of that life is the story of the Church in the Archdiocese of Glasgow. In June 1929, when he was ordained, the territory of the present archdiocese had forty-three parishes, and nineteen houses of religious. When he died, there were 105 parishes and thirty-eight religious houses, and seventy new churches had been built. He played a major part in the creation of the new parishes and religious houses, as secretary, as chancellor and as vicar general. For each of the sixty-two new parishes he had to attend meetings, take part in long discussions and negotiations. Maps had to be studied, the areas visited frequently, sites for the church inspected and reports made to the archbishop. The building of the seventy churches involved even more work—architects' plans had to be scrutinised, alterations suggested, regular visits made to the sites which were very often difficult of access, and advice given to the priests entrusted with the projects. Over the years the bishop built up an invaluable store of experience and knowledge in church building. At first glance it might appear to be an absorbing and rewarding work, but as with most occupations, constant repetition soon robs it of its first glamour and it becomes a matter of routine and tedious application. Bishop Ward brought to it a keen sense of duty, and all the priests involved with him in this work would readily pay tribute to his patience and skill and declare their own personal debt of gratitude for the help he gave them.

The religious houses founded, nineteen in all, owed an equally great debt to the bishop for the personal help and interest he gave. In fact, every religious house in the diocese looked on him as a special benefactor and valued adviser. He gave a generous and sympathetic hearing to their problems and was of great help in solving them. Particularly worthy of mention are the Bon Secours Hospital, St. Margaret's Hospice in Clydebank, and St. Francis' Maternity Home in Merryland Street. All of them benefited from his experience and knowledge in building, and it is no more than the truth to say that none of them would have been completed without his help and advice.

It was doubtless from his father that Bishop Ward learned how to be a good member of a committee. He spent endless hours and travelled repeatedly in the service of many committees, especially committees of education. When he became chaplain at Notre Dame Training College in 1948, the bishops of Scotland appointed him to the board of governors of the College and he was elected their chairman. It was merely the first of the many committees he served. Among them we find: The Central Executive Committee for the Training of Teachers; the Scottish Council for the Training of Teachers (1948-1966); the Knox Committee on the Training of Teachers; Governor of Jordanhill College of Education (1956-66); Governor of Dunfermline College of Physical Education (1956-60). He was valued and respected by his colleagues on these committees and was frequently invited by them to serve on innumerable sub-committees and other committees with similar aims. He made meticulous preparation for the meetings, studying the agenda and minutes carefully, and ensuring that he was fully versed in all the aspects of the subjects to be discussed. He exploited his skill and tact to the full in steering through the various committees the project of a new college of education for Notre Dame and his efforts were crowned with success in the new college at Bearsden. Once again the building itself owes much to his knowledge and experience in building. Bishop Ward was educated in St. Peter's College, Bearsden. He was very proud of that, and had a great love for his Alma Mater. It was a source of great joy to him that he was privileged to play a great part in the building of the new St. Peter's College at Cardross.

A diocesan treasurer requires not only skill in figures and finance but also a measure of tact and diplomacy, if he is to carry out his work successfully. The bishop was treasurer for twenty-five years. The work he did is recorded for posterity in the thousands of pages of figures in the ledgers and cash books, a record of neat entries made daily with painstaking care. Many pages have to be turned before there is any evidence of a correction. It was soul-destroying work which he did meticulously. He used all his tact and diplomacy in the allocation of the funds available, gently persuading many a parish priest to postpone a cherished project of renovation so that the money he had gathered might be loaned for a more pressing need in the diocese, the building or completion of a new church. The many financial crises which the country at large suffered during these years were reflected in the diocesan finances, but so skilfully did Bishop Ward handle these that he prevented panic or alarm. On at least two occasions there had to be a severe cut in the building programme and imposing them brought many worries and anxieties. He tackled the problem calmly, but behind the mask of calm his mind was busy devising appeals to be made casually to priests for a further loan, or a timely hint of the need for increasing collections. He gave everyone the impression that the finances ran themselves and were merely a matter of good book-keeping, but the smooth progress of the building programme was due to long hours of anxious work far into the night.

Consecrated a bishop in September 1960, new duties were added to a diary already alarmingly full. He assisted the archbishop in conferring the Sacrament of Confirmation, in Ordinations, in the consecration of churches, in preaching, and in attending the Second Vatican Council. He must have confirmed on at least 300 occasions, but there was not the slightest hint that the work was tedious—rather he gave the impression of enjoyment and an awareness of the mystery he was privileged to share. He gave to it the same meticulous attention to detail, the careful preparation and effort for perfection which he gave to all he did. Significantly on the Sunday morning he died he was preoccupied, not with his health, but with the Confirmation due that afternoon, lest the children of St. Thomas' parish might be disappointed. He consented to return to bed only when assured that the Confirmation would be done.

The fifty or so Catholic societies and institutions in the diocese claimed a share of his time and attention. He was a welcome figure at their annual general meetings and social functions, and on countless occasions a welcome speaker. Almost every one of them at one time or another had to call on him for special help or advice and they would readily acknowledge their indebtedness to him in overcoming their difficulties or launching a new project. He had a very special affection for the St. Vincent de Paul Society. He was their diocesan and national chaplain. The Legion of Mary also commanded his attention—as a priest in St. Charles' he was chaplain to their hostel in Wilton Street and later became chaplain to the Senatus. Another favourite was the Notre Dame Child Guidance Clinic. He played a great part in its foundation and in securing the new premises at Dowanhill. Nor can the University Chaplaincies be omitted—Turnbull Hall and the Chaplaincy at Strathclyde owe much to him for their foundation. The St. Margaret of Scotland Adoption Society and the Religious Education Centre would also acknowledge a special debt to him for their existence.

Devotion to Our Lady of Lourdes played a great part in his life, and almost every year he joined the diocesan pilgrimage to her shrine. More often than not it was the only holiday he permitted himself. Devotion to Lourdes is devotion to the sick, and perhaps Bishop Ward will be most warmly remembered by the priests of the diocese for his devoted attention to sick priests, visiting them weekly without fail.

Nearest of all to his heart was the work in the parish—his motto as bishop was "Pascere Gregem." He used to quote Pope John's remark to a parish priest: "You have the most important job in the Church." Significantly his own statement of his appointments begins with his appointment as curate to St. John's, Barrhead, and ends with the appointment as parish priest of Holy Cross. The people of St. Charles' parish, which he served so faithfully and which he left twenty-five years ago, still speak with great affection of his regular parochial visits, of his kindness and patience in confession, of his love for their children, of his service and care of the various societies and organisations, and above all of his extraordinary care of the sick. In Holy Cross he will be remembered for his loving care of the church which he kept so beautifully, of his zeal for the liturgy of the Mass, and again for his care of the sick and the bereaved whom he visited regularly, often after a long day of meetings or functions.

The picture given of Bishop Ward is of a man who was completely dedicated to his work. A keen sense of duty kept him going, seemingly without respite and demanding perfection in the smallest detail. It is a true picture, but it is incomplete. Although absorbed in his work, Bishop Ward found time to enjoy life; like so many men who keep themselves always busy, he never appeared unduly harassed, and was always ready to lay down what he was doing to give time to listen to someone's problems. He enjoyed the company of priests, and priests enjoyed his company. He had a keen sense of humour, and a smile was never far from his lips. Those who were privileged to work closely with him in parochial work or in administration found him a most loyal friend, ever ready to lend a sympathetic ear. He was too, an intensely spiritual man, faithful in prayer and visits to the Blessed Sacrament, with a deep love for the Mass and the Rosary, and it is surely in these that we find the secret of his intense drive. He demanded perfection in the last smallest detail, because for him a single entry in the ledger was as important as the ordination of a priest—it was God's work and so had to be done to the best of his ability.

Bishop Ward died on Sunday, 21st October, in Holy Cross presbytery. He was taken ill while getting ready for Mass, and most reluctantly returned to bed and allowed the curates to send for the doctor. He was anointed and joined in the prayers for the dying and passed peacefully to his eternal rest. The Funeral Mass was in Holy Cross church on Thursday, 25th October; the principal celebrant was Cardinal Gordon Gray. The Archbishop of Glasgow and the Apostolic Delegate, his Excellency the Most Reverend Bruno Heim, presided at the Mass. This in fact was the delegate's first visit to Glasgow. There were nearly 300 priests at the Mass, and the crowds of people were so great that hundreds were unable to get into the church. The Lord Provost, the Town Clerk, the Senior Magistrate, the Provosts of Clydebank and Dumbarton were also present, a tribute to the high esteem the civic authorities had for Bishop Ward. He was buried in the plot reserved for the bishops at St. Peter's Cemetery, Dalbeth. May he rest in peace.

Very Reverend Joseph Canon Lamont — 12th December, 1973

Canon Joseph Lamont was born at Lumphanan, Aberdeenshire, the reputed resting-place of Macbeth, on the 27th October, 1903. The family had long been connected with Braemar where an ancestor, John Lamont (an seanair buidhe, the yellow-haired elder), fell foul of the presbytery of Kincardine O' Nerl for "apostacie to poperie." He received his early schooling at Lumphanan Public School and later at Aboyne Higher Grade School. The nearest church was St. Margaret's, Aboyne, where he was baptised by the late Canon Joseph Thomson; and Sunday after Sunday, in all kinds of weather, Peter Lamont, his father, would crowd what he could of the family (Joseph was the youngest of ten) into his gig for the six miles journey to Aboyne, down in the valley.

That fact alone shows what kind of family it was. Joseph Lamont grew up in a household that was saturated with the faith, so that it is no wonder that he evinced a desire to become a priest. On the 12th August, 1918, he entered St. Mary's College, Blairs. He was accompanied that year by four other students for the diocese of Aberdeen, all of whom attained the priesthood. At Blairs he excelled both in the classroom and on the playing field.

In October 1923 he was sent to St. Sulpice, Issy, for his higher studies and completed his course at St. Sulpice, Rue de Regard, Paris, where he gained the baccalauréat en théologie. Though always of an easy-going disposition, he had a keen mind and could have proceeded further, but conditions in his native diocese necessitated his return home where he was ordained to the priesthood in the chapel of St. Mary's College, Blairs, by Bishop George Bennett on the 2nd June, 1928. That same year he began his priestly work at St. Mary's Cathedral, Aberdeen, under the benevolent eye of Mgr. John C. Meany, V.G.

His first parish was Wick where he went in August 1930 after a curacy of less than two years. Wick, with his huge barn-like church, so sparsely tenanted, was one of the outposts of the diocese and far removed from any neighbouring priest. Those were days when ecumenism was unknown and Rome a dirty word, particularly in the county of Caithness. A characteristic letter in the local press gave his arrival as yet another example of the wiles of the Scarlet Woman; they had sent first a footballer (Father Sydney Toman), now they had sent a cricketer to ensnare the youth. It is undoubtedly true that, when the time came for Father Lamont to leave Wick, the atmosphere had changed; the old prejudices had become diluted and there were many who looked with a less jaundiced eye on the faith, owing to his friendliness and to his unwillingness to let the barrier of conflicting religions stand in the way of social contact.

His next parish was Fetternear, now without a resident priest. His roots were in the country and he loved Fetternear, where he remained from May 1936 to October 1940, when he returned to the city to face the dangers of war-time bombing at Torry. Outside interests began to occupy his time. There was the prison at Craiginches where he was always a welcome visitor; there was the Education Committee on which he served with distinction and won the regard and respect of all its members; there was the Don Bosco Guild into which he infused new life as its chaplain.

In October 1954, Father Lamont was transferred to one of the bigger parishes of the diocese, to St. Thomas', Keith. Two years later came his appointment as one of the members of the Cathedral Chapter. He rarely missed a meeting and loved his contact with his contemporaries on the Chapter. He served on the Banffshire Education Committee and helped to provide a new Catholic primary school for Keith. He was to remain there until illness gradually wore him down and a full, many-sided life drew to its close. He was admitted to the Turner Memorial Hospital, Keith, but even at the end his courage and his sense of humour never deserted him. As his lifelong friend, Canon George Phillips, anointed him, he remarked: "Me today, you tomorrow." It was his last sermon (and they were never dull), the last flash of that Scottish humour which had entertained us so long. He died on the 12th December and, after the funeral Mass at St. Thomas', Keith, was laid to rest on a bitter wintry day in the old Catholic cemetery of St. Ninian's, Enzie.

Canon Lamont is the sixth priest of the diocese of Aberdeen to die within 1973. The diocese is the poorer for his passing, not merely because it has lost a priest it could ill spare, but because it has lost one who had a firm hold on the affections of his fellow priests and of the people he had served for forty-five years. A friendly, lovable figure is gone, a wise, approachable counsellor with a great fund of common sense. A kindly pastor is gone who, even if he found it irksome to keep tally of his flock, was loved by them all the same. A large-hearted priest, so helpful in times of difficulty, so humourously tolerant of our little shams, so little in love with money that he left nothing behind him, has resigned his spirit into his Father's hands. May he rest in peace.

ST. FRANCIS LEPROSY GUILD

DIRECTOR - - - - THE VERY REV. FATHER PROVINCIAL, O.F.M.
 PRESIDENT - - - - SIR HAROLD HOOD, BT., K.S.G.
 HON. TREASURER - - K. P. NEY, ESQ., F.C.A.

LEPROSY CAN BE CURED

Founded in 1895, the St. Francis Leprosy Guild has as its aim to collect alms for the assistance of missionary priests and nuns in their work for victims of leprosy throughout the world.

After the first General Meeting in 1897, a sum of £60 was divided among four leprosy colonies. Since then, £496,845 has been sent to assist leprosy patients regardless of nationality or creed, throughout the world. In 1973 £44,148 was collected and distributed among 113 leprosy colonies representing 31 countries.

WILL YOU HELP IN THIS GREAT WORK?

BY BECOMING A MEMBER OF THE GUILD—Annual Subscription not less than 25p.

BY DONATIONS—MITE BOXES.

BY AN ANNUAL COLLECTION made in SCHOOL in honour of "FATHER DAMIEN" (May 11th).

BY DEED OF COVENANT.

BY REMEMBERING THE ST. FRANCIS LEPROSY GUILD IN YOUR WILL.

Donations and subscriptions will be gratefully received by:

The Hon Secretary, St. Francis' Leprosy Guild, 20 The Boltons, London, S.W.10.

SMYLLUM PARK SCHOOL LANARK

Smyllum Park School is intended for Catholic Children deprived of home life—sent in by Social Work Departments from various parts of Scotland. It is run by the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul. The Sisters intend to start small family group homes in Glasgow in an effort to integrate the children into the local parish and community life. For the success of this venture, the Sisters will be grateful for the continued help of the many generous benefactors to Smyllum throughout past years.

The Dunkeld Sick and Retired Priests' Fund

Chairman — His Lordship, Bishop Hart.

Secretary — Rev. Francis McDermott.

The object of this Charitable Trust is to afford financial aid to the Priests of the Diocese of Dunkeld:
